The Labor Party, which went out of power in Britain in 1924, wallops the Tories on the bean and leaves Lloyd George on his ear in a big bowl of soup, as it stages a phenomenal come-back. Hoot mon! Make way for Ramsey MacDonald!

* * * *

The serious relapse of King George is carefully kept secret from the British people as they go to the polls, lest the gravity of his condition influence the election. Those people may be poorer politicians than we are, but they know more about fair play in a campaign.

That dawn never beam'd on your forefathers' eye,
But it roused each high chieftain to vanquish or die."

Once each year, at least, it is well for the American people to pause in their pursuit of wealth and pleasure long enough to reflect that everything that makes life worth while for us today is possible because our forefathers were willing to shoulder a gun and shed their blood. No pacifist ever made a contribution to liberty.

This time eleven years ago American boys gathered from the shops, the factories, the stores, the schoolrooms and farms of the land Washington had saved and Lincoln had preserved, were going over the top against the shock troops of the Kaiser, so near to Paris that the echoes of the artillery could be heard in the grand boulevards. The French children who decorate their graves owe to them the blessed fact that today they are not subjects of Germany, learning the Teutonic tongue from Herr Professor. For these children it was well worth while to die the best of all deaths.

BRITISH LABOR MAKES BIG GAIN IN PARLIAMENT

Conservative Party Lags Far Behind in General Election Returns.

LIBERAL GAIN OFFSET BY PREVIOUS LOSSES

Lady Astor Is Reelected to House of Commons by Small Margin.

PREMIER BALDWIN'S SON IS VICTORIOUS

Strength of Laborites May Enable Them to Form New Government.

London, Friday, May 31 (U.P.).—Ramsey MacDonald's Labor party was making great gains in the number of its seats in the House of Commons and the Conseravtive party was lagging well behind in general election returns at a late hour this morning. With more than one-third of the contests decided, there was a growing possibility that the aLbor party would increase its representation in the Commons to such an extent that it would be able to form a government. At 3:30 a. m., 212 of the 606 seats contested were reported complete.

The Labor party candidates had won 116 of the 212 seats, representing a gain at the expense of the other parties of 54 seats. Only three seats held by Laborites in the last Parliament had been lost.

Conservatives Win 79 Seats.

The Conservative party, now in power under Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, had won 79 of the 212 seats. The Conservative candidates had lost 50 seats which they previously held and had gained but one at the expense of another party.

The Liberal party had 13 seats of the 212, representing a gain of 7. The gain, however, was offset by the loss of 10 seats which they had previously held.

One of the outstanding features of the election returns so far has been the failure of the widely heralded Liberal revival which David Lloyd George, party leader and war-time prime minister, had predicted as a result of his scheme to relieve the vital unemployment problem in England.

Independent candidates had obtained 4 of the 212 seats recorded.

At this hour the total popular vote was 7,803,158.

This was divided as follows:

Labor, 3,229,835.
Conservative, 2,856,023.
Liberal, 1,611,472.
Others, 105,828.

Lady Astor, American-born member of the House of Commons, was reelected to her seat.

Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary, was reelected to his seat in the House of Commons in one of the closest races of the general election. Early unofficial returns showed Chamberlain had a majority of only 50 votes over his opponent. A recount was demanded before the election could be decided.

Lady Astor's Margin Close.

Lady Astor, who has made one of the most exciting campaigns of the election, polled 16,625 votes. Her Laborite opponent, W. Westwood, polled 16,414, and T. H. Aggett, the Liberal candidate, 5,430.

Chamberlain's victory was even closer. The recount showed the foreign secretary polled 16,862 to 16,819 for O. G. Willey, his Laborite opponent.

Among the surprising Conservative reversals in favor of Labor was the defeat of Sir Thomas Inskip, attorney general, seeking a seat from Bristol, central division, which had been believed safely a Conservative territory.

Keech Wins in Auto Race Fatal to Rival

160,000 See Spence Die in Crash; Meyer Second at Indianapolis.

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

Indianapolis, Ind., May 30 (A.P.).—Death and destruction were strewn in the wreckage of that scorching torch called the 500-mile automobile sweepstakes at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway today.

With a record-smashing crowd of 160,000 viewing the spectacle, Ray Keech, daring 28-year-old driver of Philadelphia, bounced his tiny eight-cylinder racing creation over the finish tape, a winner in 5 hours 7 minutes and 25 47-100 seconds. Louis Meyer, of Los Angeles, winner of the 1928 race, finished second, nearly 6 minutes behind Keech, with Jimmy Gleason, another Philadelphia driver, pulling up in third place.

Twelve of the 33 drivers who wheeled their cars out for the start, survived the terrific test of speed. Keech averaged 97.585 miles an hour, a performance that did not even threaten speed records for the race.

The race resulted in the death of William Spence, 24-year-old driver of Los Angeles, and the miraculous escape of five other drivers. Spence, bounding over the perilously bumpy 2½-mile brick course at terrifying speed, was killed when on his fortieth mile. His car turned over as he was shooting out of a turn and going into the backstretch.

RAY KEECH.

The car had struck a retaining wall on a skid, threw Spence into the air in the middle of the track, turned completely over, righted itself, and then came to a stop far down the track.

Spence was thrown clear of the car but he sustained a fractured skull that resulted in him joining the list of

RELAPSE OF ILLNESS STRIKES KING GEORGE

British Ruler Is Confined to Windsor Castle as His Nation Goes to Polls.

ATTACKS SIMILAR, CLAIM

London, May 30 (U.P.).—King George V has suffered a sudden relapse in the course of recovery from his extended illness of last winter.

His majesty is confined to bed with a "feverish attack" at Windsor Castle, the ancient home of British kings near Windsor.

Official announcement of his condition was made at Buckingham Palace tonight.

The voters of Great Britain went to the polls in every city and hamlet today to elect a new House of Commons without knowledge of the fact that their king was lying ill at Windsor, where he went two weeks ago after a long period of recuperation at Craigwell House, near Bognor.

Announcement of his condition was withheld until after election day, and will not be published in England until tomorrow morning.

King George has been confined to his room with a cold since Sunday, according to an unconfirmed report current tonight. The report, which was not verified officially, said the news had been withheld because of the fear it would influence the general election today.

The royal family takes the view that scrupulous fairness forbids publication of such news at a time of political activity. The theory is that voters might be inclined, in a time of crisis, to keep the existing government in power; and that the crown's complete separation from politics would be jeopardized.

The withholding of news of the king's feverish attack permitted the voters to give full attention to their duties at the polls, where the Conservative government was fighting to retain its power. Otherwise, authorities believed that a hint of the king's condition would result in distracting the voters at a critical time.

Lord Dawson of Penn, one of the two physicians who took leading parts in saving the life of the king during his long illness, arrived at Croyden Aerodrome from Paris late in the afternoon by airplane. Lord Dawson and Sir Stanley Hewett headed the array

WHOLESALE KILLING PLOT IS SUSPECTED

Police Believe Woman Held in "Murder for Insurance" Planned Others.

RECANTS HER CONFESSION

Macon, Ga., May 30 (A.P.).—While police tonight sought to connect Mrs. J. C. Powers with several "insurance plots" and liquor transactions, her attorney announced that insanity would be her defense against a charge of conspiring with Earl Manchester, 21, to kill James Parks, a 25-year-old roomer in her home, for his insurance.

Officers investigating the activities of the elderly rooming house proprietor, said tonight they had learned she had engaged in liquor transactions.

Mrs. Powers tonight said she was 71 years old. Previously she told police she was 65.

Chief of Police Ben T. Watkins said the woman had used newspaper advertisements "offering willing young men a home and family companionship" as a lure. At least two young men besides Parks, who was found dead Tuesday, answered. One, Hollis L. Mullis, was sent to an insurance examiner by the landlady last February 4 and turned down on a $12,000 policy.

T. S. Martin, a photographer's assistant, today said he answered Mrs. Powers' ad, and that she urged him to let her pay the premium on a Lansing policy and become beneficiary. He never returned.

Suspicion was directed toward Mrs. Powers in the Parks slaying when detectives found her "burning something in a stove" while the temperature outside was 84 degrees. The woman confessed verbally before ten witnesses, but was hysterical and later repudiated her confesion.

Manchester told his story and signed it before a notary public. He said the aged woman offered him $1,000 if and when she collected $1,400 insurance on Parks' life. She argued with him two weeks, Manchester said, telling him she had Parks insured, and pointing out "how easy it would be."

Finally accepting, the confession ran, Manchester tried for three days and finally succeeded in luring Parks to a lonely spot on the East Macon river front and shooting him twice in the head. Parks went along thinking they were going to hijack a liquor car, Manchester said.

Mrs. H. H. Rogers in Paris; To Get Divorce, Friends Say

Has Been Seen Lately in Company of Count Salm-Hoogstraeten.

Paris, May 30 (A.P.).—Mrs. Henry Huddleston Rogers has taken an apartment in the Champs-Elysees district and friends say that she will sue for a divorce from Col. H. H. Rogers as soon as she has established a residence within the meaning of French law.

It will take some time for Mrs. Rogers to fulfill this condition. Formerly the French courts were lax with divorce plaintiffs from the United States or other foreign countries. Now they require positive proof of an intention to reside permanently in France and a short stay no longer is construed as furnishing that proof.

Recently Mrs. Rogers has been seen several times with her former son-in-law, Count Ludwig Salm-Hoogstraeten. It was reported today that his present

Woman Badly Hurt When Hit by Truck

Miss Catherine McMillan's Skull Is Fractured; Man Arrested.

Miss Catherine McMillan, 32 years old, 2301 Cathedral avenue northwest, was seriously injured last night when she was knocked down and run over while crossing the street at Connecticut and Cathedral avenues northwest by a heavy automobile.

She was taken to the office of Dr. R. T. Holden, 3111 Sixteenth street northwest, by Joseph Frank Donovan, 43 years old, 6 Hillyer court northwest, radio shop proprietor, said by police to have been operating the automobile. Dr. Holden notified police and summoned an Emergency Hospital ambulance. Physicians there believe she has a fractured skull, lacerations and bruises about the face and a smashed nose.

Police of the Fourteenth Precinct who went to the physician's office arrested Donovan on a charge of operating an automobile while intoxicated. He was held at the Fourteenth Precinct.

WisconsinGovernor Signs Drastic Labor Measure

Madison, Wis., May 30 (A.P.).—Rejected by every other State, the drastic "yellow dog contract bill," sponsored by the American Federation of Labor, has been signed by Gov. Walter J. Kohler, of Wisconsin, himself a millionaire employer.

The measure voids all contracts in which employes agree not to join labor unions, or whereby farmers agree not to become members of cooperative marketing organizations.

DEATH TOLL 46 AS HEAT HOLDS NATION IN GRIP

Two Dead, One Prostrated in Capital as Mercury Reaches 92.

NO RELIEF FORECAST FOR NEXT 24 HOURS

New York Leads With 13 Victims of Weather or Drowning.

BOY WADES TOO FAR IN POTOMAC; DROWNS

Merry-Makers Swelter in One of Hottest Memorial Days on Record.

The sizzling heat which presented Washington with one of its hottest Memorial Days on record was exceeded in many parts of the country and, with summer storms and floods in other sections, produced a death toll due to heat and drownings that reached 46 by nightfall.

The heat wave, which made miserable those living between the Rocky Mountain region and the Atlantic seaboard, is not likely to be broken for another 24 hours, according to Weather Bureau forecasts, despite the fact that Washington may be visited by thundershowers this afternoon.

Two of the deaths occurred in Washington. In addition, one man is still in the hospital, suffering from heat prostration, and hundreds of Memorial Day celebrants have not recovered fully from the near exhaustion brought about by the burning rays of yesterday's sun.

Woman Stricken at Ball Park.

Mrs. Cora Lee Pope, 44 years old, of 3323 Forrest Park avenue, Baltimore, Md., fell dead yesterday afternoon shortly before 1 o'clock as she entered the American League Baseball Park. She suffered a heart attack, superinduced by the heat.

After the Casualty Hospital ambulance had been summoned, Mrs. Pope was pronounced dead by Dr. J. A. Jordon. After talking with relatives, Dr. J. Ramsay Nevitt, District coroner, issued a certificate of death from natural causes.

James Johnson, colored, 13 years old, of 1314 C street southeast, was drowned about 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the eastern branch of the Potomac River near the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge while seeking relief from the heat.

The boy had been wading with several companions near the bank, but ventured out into the channel and sank immediately. He drowned in 20 feet of water. His body was recovered several hours later by police of the Harbor Precinct. The boy's death is the second by drowning in that portion of the river within a week.

Alvin Winbish, colored, 27 years old, a chauffeur, living at 2145 N street northwest, collapsed from the heat at his home yesterday afternoon. He was taken to Emergency Hospital in an ambulance and treated by Dr. Leon Gordon. He is expected to recover.

Drug Stores Render Aid.

Drug stores in all sections of the city served as first aid stations for hundreds of persons throughout the day.

The highest official temperature, 86 degrees, was reached at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, according to Weather Bureau reports. The street temperature, felt by most citizens, however, reached a maximum of 92 degrees at the same hour, according to the thermometer at the kiosk, on Pennsylvania avenue near Fourteenth street northwest. A high humidity throughout the day, also added to the discomfort of the populace.

A tabulation of deaths based on press reports from various sections include the following:

New York City, killed by heat or drowned, 13.
Philadelphia and vicinity, killed by heat, 2.
Albany, N. Y., killed by heat, 2.
Hartford, Conn., killed by heat and storms, 4.
Boston, killed by heat, 3.
Texas, drowned in floods, 7.
Edgerton, Wis., drowned, 4.
Chicago, killed by heat, 2.
Decatur, Ill., drowned, 1.
Wabash, Ind., drowned, 1.

PEACE NEED STRESSED BY HOOVER IN ADDRESS AT MEMORIAL SERVICE

President's Speech Gives Foreign Nations U. S. Policy on Arms.

CONCEDES NECESSITY FOR PARITY ON NAVIES

America Is Eager to Begin Program for End of War, He Says.

FOREIGN ARMAMENTS ARE CITED IN HIS TALK

Implied Appeal to Peoples of World Instead of Their Governments Seen.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

President Hoover's Memorial Day speech yesterday gives nations throughout the world their first close-up view of the general policy which America intends to follow in the matter of peace and hoped-for limitation of armaments. Mr. Hoover stresses three all-important phases of the combined peace and arms limitation problem.

First—He places America on record as willing to translate the ideals and aspirations of the people for peace into an effective and practical program of action, with limitation of armaments to constitute the corner stone and proof of good faith in the upbuilding of such a program.

Second—He concedes the necessity far naval parity and adequate national defense, but urges the adoption of relative reduction in armaments on the ground that no nation's defense is jeopardized if all nations apply the same yardstick for this reduction.

Serves Foreign Notice.

Third—He serves notice on foreign nations generally and Europe in particular, that despite the Kellogg peace pact and despite their protestations for peace, they are continuing to increase their armaments in preparedness for war.

There is an implied appeal to the peoples rather than to their governments in Mr. Hoover's portrayal of the benefits and blessings of a peace program endangered by increasing preparedness for war. But, taken as a whole, the President's address is far less emphatic in its warning to Europe than Mr. Coolidge's last armistice day speech wherein Europe was told in plain words that unless she intended to limit naval armaments America would take the necessary steps to be prepared against all contingencies.

Mr. Hoover makes it clear that America will insist upon adequate defense and will demand naval parity and thereby clearly shows that in this respect there is to be no change from the Coolidge policy. By his references to practical application of peace and arms limitation programs, the President lets Europe know in unmistakable fashion that there is to be no controlling visionary or idealistic policies in the matter of safeguarding America's national defense.

Hopes Seen as Idealistic.

The hopes expressed by Mr. Hoover for the actual application of the Kellogg pact may be considered somewhat idealistic by the hard-headed European statesmen who admit that they do not take the pact seriously, but half the value of the Kellogg treaty admittedly consists in its psychological effect on the various peoples and the more seriously this pact is referred to, the greater its effect along this line. By linking reduction of armaments so closely with the pact, Mr. Hoover gives European governments an opportunity to at least seemingly demonstrate their faith in the pact by limiting their armaments.

In dealing with arms limitation, Mr. Hoover is at his best, not only in what

Text of Speech

President Hoover's Memorial Day address at Arlington follows:

Fellow Countrymen:

Over the years since the Civil War the Grand Army of the Republic have conducted this sacred ceremony in memoriam of those who died in service of their country. The ranks of their living comrades have been steadily thinned with time. But other wars have reaped their harvest of sacrifice, and these dead, too, lie buried here. Their living comrades now join in conduct of this memorial, that it may be carried forward when the noble men who today represent the last of the Grand Army shall have joined those already in the Great Beyond.

This sacred occasion has impelled our Presidents to express their aspirations in furtherance of peace. No more appropriate tribute can be paid to our heroic dead than to stand in the presence of their resting places and pledge renewed effort that these sacrifices shall not be claimed again.

Today, as never before in peace, new life-destroying instrumentalities and new systems of warfare are being added to those that even so recently spread death and desolation over the whole continent of Europe. Despite those lessons every government continues to increase and perfect its armament. And while this progress is being made in the development of the science of warfare, the serious question arises—are we making equal progress in devising ways and means to avoid those frightful fruits of men's failures that have blotted with blood so many chapters of the world history.

Alludes to Kellogg Pact.

There is a great hope, for since this day a year ago a solemn declaration has been proposed by America to the world and has been signed by 40 nations. It states that they

"Solemnly declare in the names of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war for the solution of international controversies and renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another."

They

"Agree that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means."

That is a declaration that springs from the aspirations and hearts of men

CRIME COMMISSION WILL DIVIDE TASKS

One Group to Study Cause, Other to Deal With Cure for Lawlesness.

BODY OFFICIALLY NAMED

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover's commission for the study of crime conditions will be known as "The National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement."

In making this announcement yesterday, George W. Wickersham, chairman, also said that Max Lowenthal, of New York, had been selected as secretary, and Leonard V. Harrison, of the Bureau of Social Hygiene, as statistician.

To expedite the inquiry, the commission has divided into two groups, one to deal with the causes of crime and the other to deal with remedies. The first group is composed of Newton D. Baker, Henry W. Anderson, Monte M. Lemann and Miss Ada L. Comstock.

Tried for Murder, Autoist Fined $50 on Recklessness

Lester Gruber Escapes on Minor Charge in Girl's Death.

Charged with murder as the result of an automobile accident, Lester Gruber, 30 years old, of Detroit, Mich., went on trial yesterday in Fairfax County Circuit Court at Fairfax, Va. A few minutes later the court directed a verdict of guilty of reckless driving and imposed a fine of $50. The verdict followed a conference between the State's attorney, counsel for the defense and Circuit Judge Howard W. Smith.

The charge on which Gruber went to trial was the outgrowth of an automobile accident on July 14, 1928, on the Washington-Richmond highway, in which Miss Bernice Gard, of 1714 H street northwest, a passenger, was fatally injured. Miss Gard died four days after the accident at the Alexandria Hospital.

Gruber was represented by State Senator Frank L. Ball and Charles C. Collins, Washington attorney.

Firm Defense of Kellogg Treaty Is Broadcast by Executive.

GREAT THRONG PAYS TRIBUTE TO WAR DEAD

National Cemetery Again Is Shrine of Shrines on Holiday.

COLORFUL ARRAY SEEN AS PRESIDENT SPEAKS

Distinguished Officials, as Well as Service Aids, Are in Attendance.

President Hoover, broadcasting a ringing defense of the Kellogg treaty at Arlington Amphitheater to lead Washington and the Nation yesterday in a mammoth Memorial Day observance, issued the administration's surprising ultimatum that "we believe the time has come when we must know whether the pact we have signed is real."

Amplified by loud speakers reaching the thousands packing the edifice and countless others parked in automobiles throughout the cemetery, aside from the vast invisible audience on two gigantic radio hookups, the stirring address came after the Chief Executive first had symbolized the reverence of a grateful Nation to its heroic war dead in laying a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

This momentous event, marking the third address of the President and his first strictly public appearance as a speaker since his inauguration, climaxed several score patriotic, religious and semiofficial gatherings in Washington and the District of Columbia throughout the day. While the sweeping observance ranged from exercises at cemeteries and monuments to a downtown parade of impressive proportions, Arlington Cemetery once more became the shrine of shrines to which pilgrimages were in progress the entire day.

Colorful Array Attends.

Presented under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic, through its Department of the Potomac, these major exercises drew the most colorful and distinguished array of officials and private individuals in Washington's observance of this occasion. Mrs. Hoover, several members of the Chief Executive's Cabinet and his military, naval and marine aids, ranking officers of the three branches of the service, members of Congress and representatives of various patriotic organizations, among others, were in attendance.

Presented by Hosea B. Moulton, past department commander, Grand Army of the Republic, President Hoover stepped before the microphone shortly before 2 o'clock to brave the heat and glare of a broiling sun to begin his comparatively brief address, while the crowd accorded him a tumultuous ovation of cheers and applause.

"This sacred occasion has impelled our Presidents to express their aspirations in furtherance of peace," he declared. "No more appropriate tribute can be paid to our heroic dead than to stand in the presence of their resting places and pledge renewed effort that these sacrifices shall not be claimed again.

Arms Increase Persists.

Despite those lessons every government continues to increase and perfect its armament. And while this progress is being made in the development of the science of warfare, the serious question arises, 'Are we making equal progress in devising ways and means to avoid those frightful fruits of men's failures that have blotted with blood so many chapters of the world's history?'

"There is a great hope, for since this day a year ago a solemn declaration has been proposed by America to the world and has been signed by 40 nations. But notwithstanding this noble assurance, preparedness for war still advances steadily in every land.

"If this agreement is to fulfill its high purpose we and other nations must accept its consequences; we must clothe faith and idealism with action. That action must march with the inexorable tread of common sense and realism to accomplishment. Consequently, if we are honest we must reconsider our own naval armament and the armaments of the world in the light of their defensive and not their aggressive use. Despite the declarations of the Kellogg pact, every important country has since the signing of that agreement been engaged in strengthening its naval arm. We are still borne on the tide of competitive building. Fear and suspicion will never slacken unless we can halt competitive construction of arms. They will never disappear unless we can turn this tide toward actual reduction.

New Program Advanced.

"The present administration of the United States has undertaken to approach this vital problem with a new program. We feel that it is useless for us to talk of the limitation of arms if such limitations are to be set so high as virtually to be an incitement to increase armament.

"We believe the time has come when we must know whether the pact we have signed is real, whether we are condemned to further and more extensive programs of naval construction. Limitation upward is not our goal, but actual reduction of existing commitments to lowered levels."

In the only other address of the occasion, Representative C. Ellis Moore, of Ohio, extolled Lincoln as the ideal American and the patriot who typifies the best in the republic. In conclusion he lauded Hoover in declaring that "under his inspiring leadership for law obedience and law enforcement we shall go forward and carry on as best we can."

Upon leaving the Amphitheater President Hoover paused with bared head at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, where Mrs. Hoover also had placed a single magnolia blossom, while separate detachments of soldiers, sailors and marines, with rifles at present arms, formed an honor guard. Lacking only in impressiveness the presidential salute of 21 guns from the batteries at Fort Myer, which greeted his arrival at the Amphitheater, the President motored quietly out of the cemetery in view of row upon row of white marble slabs beautified by the red paper poppies of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Warm Sun Beats Down.

A day unmarred by even a threat of rain witnessed the presentation of the numerous programs as scheduled and their attendance in almost every instance by larger throngs than had been anticipated. The unseasonable heat waxed somewhat more unpleasant during the early afternoon and a broiling sun beat down on the Amphitheater during the principal exercises there. Mrs. Hoover finally raised a green parasol over the President to shield him from the heat and glare. The weather failed to thin the ranks of spectators, however, and every seat and every foot of standing room remained occupied until the last.

The program opened with the introduction of Commander Samuel G. Mawson, of the G. A. R., and Capt. Frank Lockhead, U. S. A., department commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in the District, prior to the presentation of colors by Capt. John Middleton and Color Bearer Hazard Wheeler. Others participating in this program were James G. Yaden, department commander, United Spanish War Veterans, who read Gen. John A. Logan's original order establishing Memorial Day; Harlan Wood, American Legion department commander, who recited Lincoln's Gettysburg Address; the Rev. Lucius C. Clark, chancellor of American University, and the Rev. V. O. Anderson, department chaplain of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who, respectively, pronounced the invocation and benediction.

Vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl, Herman Fakler and Miss Jeanette E. McCaffrey, accompanied by the United States Marine Corps Band, which also played several numbers.

War Veterans Parade.

Through throng-flanked streets of downtown Washington aged Union veterans of the Civil War and the more spritely defenders of the Nation in subsequent conflicts, yesterday morning paraded with unfurled standards and martial airs to the assembly point from which they made their annual pilgrimage to Arlington National Cemetery to pay homage to their departed comrades.

The parade was led by the United States Marine Band, and following in immediate succession were Capt. John Middleton, chief marshal, and the thinning line of the Grand Army of the Republic. An immense bank of massed flags then followed, after which came the United Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion Posts, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, National Indian War Veterans, the Indian War Veterans and the American Veterans of Hellenic Descent.

From the District Building the line of march was around the south end of the Treasury, north on a circuitous route of the business district, until it finally ended at Thirteenth and B streets northwest, where the participants boarded special cars for the cemetery.

FRANCE AND BRITAIN HONOR U. S. HEROES

Thousands Make Pilgrimage to Graves of American World War Dead.

GEN. PERSHING SPEAKER

Paris, May 30 (U.P.).—Thousands of American war veterans and tourists visited the French war cemeteries today in observance of Memorial Day.

Bright sunshine favored the ceremonies and the graves of the war dead were covered with bright flags and flowers. French school children walked for miles to each cemetery, where they heard their teachers laud the sacrifice of the American soldiers.

Gen. John J. Pershing spoke at Belleau Wood Cemetery, where the American Second division marine casualties are buried. Robert E. Olds, former Undersecretary of State at Washington, spoke at the Oise and Aisne Cemeteries, after a pilgrimage to the tomb of the soldier-poet, Sergt. Joyce Kilmer.

Gen. Gouraud Pays Tribute.

Norman Armour, American charge d'affaires; Minister of War Painleve and Gen. Gouraud spoke at Suresnes, near Paris, where tribute was paid to the war dead and to the late Ambassador Myron T. Herrick.

The tomb of the French unknown soldier at the Arc de Triomphe was wreathed at noon.

London, May 30 (U.P.).—The graves of 950 American soldiers who died in the World War and are buried in Great Britain and Ireland were decorated today.

The United States, Britain and Canada joined in the Memorial Day services. A wreath of flowers was placed on each grave.

The first ceremony of the day was conducted by the London Post of the American Legion at the cenotaph war memorial of the British Empire. The second services was at St. Margaret's.

Davis Gettysburg Speaker.

Gettysburg, Pa., May 30 (A.P.).—Lauding the part played by labor in the Battle of Gettysburg, James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, today called upon the American people to dedicate themselves to peaceful abolition of slavery to poverty, ignorance and intolerance.

Unemployment, low wages and discrimination against age in industry are among the problems to be solved before the last vestige of slavery is removed among the American people, the Secretary told a crowd of thousands in the national cemetery overlooking the spot where Abraham Lincoln delivered his historic address.

The Civil War, Mr. Davis declared, gave the Nation a new birth of freedom and gave its people a new freedom. The same type of factory hand who fought in the Battle of Gettysburg, he said, today can rise to leadership of great businesses, become eminent in the sciences and aspire to honored places of public trust.

Declaring that he believed Lincoln would be especially the champion of the laboring man, Secretary Davis asserted: "We must make the position of the worker even more secure in his present position."

"For one thing," he said, "we are living just now in a time when science and invention, ever seeking to lessen and save human labor, tend to throw many workers out of their old occupations and send them sometimes on a long search for new ones, with poverty ever ready to render them its slaves for a while. I believe that is one thing we must regard as an old order to be replaced by a new and better order as soon as we can."

Baltimore Woman Hurt As Two Autos Collide

Miss Dora M. Harris, of Baltimore, was injured yesterday afternoon in an automobile accident on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, 1 mile north of Berwyn, Md., when the automobile in which she was riding with her mother, Mrs. William E. Harris, of Baltimore, was struck head-on by another automobile which swerved to cut in ahead of a line of cars.

Miss Harris, police said, was shaken up and received a fractured wrist. MacDonald Newborn, colored, 2430 Ontario road northwest, said by police to have been operating the other automobile, was arrested by Corpl. Dietsch, of the Maryland police, on a charge of reckless driving. He was held at the Berwyn Jail last night for a hearing on June 3. The Harris machine was demolished.

RACING AUTOMOBILE KILLS 2, INJURES 3

Car, Traveling 85 Miles Per Hour, Plows Into Group of Spectators.

BOY SAID TO BE CAUSE

New York, May 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Two presons were killed and three others injured, two of them seriously, when the Dusenberg special, driven by Bernie Katz, of Flatbush, left the dirt track at the Metropolitan Fair Grounds, Middle Village, Queens, this afternoon and plowed into a small group of spectators standing on a slight embankment about 15 feet from the track.

The car was traveling at the rate of 85 miles an hour when the accident occurred. Both of those killed were spectators. One was identified as Damascus McKenna, 48, of Flushing. The other, who was taken to Wyckoff Heights Hospital, Brooklyn, has not been identified. He was a well-dressed man of about 45.

Katz, the driver, who is 25 and lives in Flatbush, was in a critical condition in Jamaica Hospital tonight with a fractuerd skull.

The others injured were an unidentified boy about 14 years old, who was taken to St. John's Hospital with a lacerated scalp and possible fractured skull, and Jacob Anselem, 27, of Elmhurst, who was taken to Jamaica Hospital with a fractured left thigh.

Katz was still conscious when police extricated him from the wreckage of his overturned car, and in the ambulance on the way to the hospital told Policeman John Lucian, of the Newtown Precinct, that, when about half-way around the track, he swerved to the right to avoid hitting a boy who darted out to cross the track. He lost control of his car then, and it plunged up the small embankment at the edge of a fence which extends about half way around the track.

Police believed he struck the person he tried to avoid, as the unidentified boy who was injured was found lying at the edge of the track. The others struck were on the higher ground a short distance from the course.

The auto, after lunging into the small group of spectators, tore down the other side of the embankment into a hollow, where it overturned.

The accident occurred shortly after 4 p. m. while Katz was on the fourth lap of a 10-lap elimination race being run off preparatory to a 15-mile special race.

The point where the car left the track is about a quarter of a mile away from the grandstand, and most of the people at the races were unaware of what had happened. The other races were run off on schedule.

Profiteers Scored By Patrick Hurley

Unfair for One Man to Die and Another Grow Rich, He Declares.

Lexington, Ky., May 30 (United Press).—It is unjust and dishonest to expect one man to die for his country while another is profiting by war, Assistant Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley said today in a speech delivered at the dedication of a memorial building to Kentuckians who died in the World War. Hurley is the man who will have charge of drafting the administration's proposed bill to conscript industry along with man power in time of war.

His remarks were considered significant in view of the criticism recently leveled at the War Department for sending to Congress a bill to conscript men in time of war without making provision for the conscription of industry. Secretary of War Good subsequently announced the industrial legislation was in preparation and would be ready for Congress within three months.

"In time of national emergency," Hurley said, "it is wrong to place the whole responsibility upon the young men who make up the armed forces. All of our citizens must share the burdens and responsibilities of war. The profiteer must be eliminated.

"Our measures of preparedness must be reasonable. Above all, it must be preparedness against war, not for war. The United States must maintain a reasonable degree of preparedness until war is outlawed."

TEXT OF HOOVER'S ADDRESS IN ARLINGTON AMPHITHEATER

and women throughout the world. It is a solemn covenant to which the great nations of the world have bound themselves.

But notwithstanding this noble assurance, preparedness for war still advances steadily in every land. As a result the pessimist calls this covenant a pious expression of foreign offices, a trick of statesmen on the hopes of humanity, for which we and other nations will be held responsible without reserve. With this view I can not agree.

But, if this agreement is to fulfill its high purpose, we and other nations must accept its consequences; we must clothe faith and idealism with action. That action must march with the inexorable tread of common sense and realism to accomplishment.

Armament Only for Defense.

If this declaration really represents the aspirations of peoples; if this covenant be genuine proof that the world has renounced war as an instrument of national policy, it means at once an abandonment of the aggressive use of arms by every signatory nation and becomes a sincere declaration that all armament hereafter shall be used only for defense. Consequently, if we are honest we must reconsider our own naval armament and the armaments of the world in the light of their defensive and not their aggressive use. Our Navy is the first, and in the world sense the only important, factor in our national preparedness. It is a powerful part of the arms of the world.

To make ready for defense is a primary obligation upon every statesman and adequate preparedness is an assurance against aggression. But, if we are to earnestly predicate to our views upon renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy, if we are to set standards that naval strength is purely for defense and not for aggression, then the strength in fighting ships required by nations is but relative to that of other powers. All nations assent to this—that defensive needs of navies are relative. Moreover, other nations concede our contention for parity in naval strength with the strength of the powers. With these principles before us our problem is to secure agreement among nations that we shall march together toward reductions in naval equipment.

Despite the declarations of the Kellogg pact, every important country has since the signing of that agreement been engaged in strengthening its naval arm. We are still borne on the tide of competitive building. Fear and suspicion disappear but slowly from the world. Democracies can only be led to undertake the burdens of increasing naval construction by continued appeal to fear, by constant envisaging of possible conflict, by stimulated imaginings of national dangers, by glorification of war. Fear and suspicion will never slacken unless we can halt competitive construction of arms. They will never disappear unless we can turn this tide toward actual reduction.

Calls for Rational Yardstick.

But to arrive at any agreement through which we can, marching in company with our brother nations, secure a reduction of armament, but, maintaining a just preparedness for the protection of our people, we must find a rational yardstick with which to make reasonable comparisons of their naval units with ours and thus maintain an agreed relativity. So far the world has failed to find such a yardstick. To say that such a measure can not be found is the counsel of despair, it is a challenge to the naval authorities of the world, it is the condemnation of the world to the Sisyphean toil of competitive armament.

The present administration of the United States has undertaken to approach this vital problem with a new program. We feel that it is useless for us to talk of the limitation of arms if such limitations are to be set so high as virtually to be an incitement to increase armament. The idea of limitation of arms has served a useful purpose. It made possible conferences in which the facts about national aspirations could be discussed frankly in an atmosphere of friendliness and conciliation. Likewise the facts of the technical problems involved, and the relative values of varying national needs, have been clarified by patient comparison of expert opinions.

But still the net result has been the building of more fighting ships. Therefore we believe the time has come when we must know whether the pact we have signed is real, whether we are condemned to further and more extensive programs of naval construction. Limitation upward is not our goal, but actual reduction of existing commitments to lowered levels.

Endless Blessings in Program.

Such a program, if it be achieved, is fraught with endless blessings. The smaller the armed force of the world, the less will armed force be left in the minds of men as an instrument of national policy. The smaller the armed forces of the world, the less will be the number of men withdrawn from the creative and productive labors. Thus we shall relieve the toilers of the nations of the deadening burden of unproductive expenditures, and above all, we shall deliver them from the greatest of human calamities—fear. We shall breathe an air cleared of poison, of destructive thought, and of potential war.

But the pact that we have signed by which we renounce war as an instrument of national policy, by which we agree to settle all conflicts, of whatever nature, by pacific means, implies more than the reduction of arms to a basis of simple defense. It implies that nations will conduct their daily intercourse in keeping with the spirit of that agreement. It implies that we shall endeavor to develop those instrumentalities of peaceful adjustment that will enable us to remove disputes from the field of emotion to the field of calm and judicial consideration.

It is fitting that we should give our minds to these subjects on this occasion; that we should give voice to these deepest aspirations of the American people, in this place. That aspiration is that the world should have peace. These dead whom we have gathered here today to honor, these valiant and unselfish souls who gave life itself in service of their ideals, evoke from us the most solemn mood of consecration. They died that peace should be established. Our obligations is to see it maintained. Nothing less than our resolve to give ourselves with equal courage to the ideal of our day will serve to manifest our gratitude for their sacrifices, our undying memory of their deeds, our emulation of their glorious example.

HOOVER STRESSES PEACE NEED IN HIS MEMORIAL DAY SPEECH

he does say but in what he does not say. He avoids any suggestion, however remote, that the United States will limit its armaments in consideration of the pact, irrespective of what action other nations take. This idea of having America sacrifice her national defense as an example to Europe, with the hope that Europe may see fit to follow, is perhaps the most dangerous doctrine which the pacifists have enunciated since the Kellogg treaty. Mr. Hoover's speech gives no solace to the sponsors of this propaganda.

President Refers to Arms Ratio.

The new yardstick for measuring relative naval strength is referred to by the President as an untried factor in the efforts so far made to work out a satisfactory formula as a consequence of which nations might actually reduce armaments without weakening their relative naval strength. Whatever one may think of the arms reduction problem now under discussion, it is conceded on all sides that if a satisfactory relative reduction could be agreed upon, each nation would be justified from practically every standpoint to adopt it and live up to it. And the President says enough about the needs of defense to support the British contention that no reduction should be undertaken beyond the limit of safety for the defense of the British Empire.

The President has succeeded in avoiding much of the usual line of platitudinous statements invariably found in speeches on the subject of peace. The statements, in conclusion, respecting the valiant and unselfish American dead, who sacrificed themselves on the field of battle in the cause of peace, were in keeping with previous statements on similiar occasions since the end of the war, but these statements are not to be interpreted as statements of fact. Those who fought and died in the last war had no thought of sacrificing themselves to promote any peace program for the benefit of humanity. They were fighting for Uncle Sam and the flag and were acting as their country's defenders in furtherance of grim war, without thought of peace pacts or peace sentiments of the future.

Navy for Defense Only.

There will be some discussion in naval circles over the President's statement that the American Navy must be for defense only and not for aggression. In a broad sense, this statement is a reiteration of statements made during the past two administrations, but the wording is slightly different. Adequate naval defense means a Navy that can defend by aggressive tactics against the enemy, and not by a passive role. The best naval defense is always offense, and naval authorities would never consent to a program whereby the American Navy was restricted to remaining defensively in American waters in the event of war.

Mr. Hoover's statement is therefore construed to mean that America will insist upon an adequate Navy for offense and defense under any circumstances, but will not consider building a Navy with a view to adopting aggressive tactics against any other country—that is, aggressive in time of peace, or built with a view to doing more than defending America against attack.

GERMANY RELIEVED OF OCCUPATION COST

Reparations Experts Meet to Settle Moot Points for Agreement.

DETAILS OF COMPROMISE

Paris, May 30 (U.P.).—The reparations experts of the allied nations met tonight to clear up the remaining moot points in the settlement of German reparations payments and to put their official stamp of approval on the work already accomplished.

The experts have arranged for Germany to quit paying costs of the allied troops' occupation of the Rhineland on September 1, the day the Young compromise plan goes into effect, the United Press learned. The foreign occupation may continue as long as the governments desire and the Versailles treaty permits (1935) but the allies will be forced to pay the cost of about $400,000 a month.

Official French sources said there were no plans at present for shortening the period of occupation.

The Germans are expected to insist on evacuation of the Rhineland at the June League of Nations Council meeting at Madrid.

Chairman Owen D. Young conferred with Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, chief German delegate, when Schacht returned here from Versailles this evening. The German delegate was smiling and was said to be anxious to end the conference as quickly as possible.

Scale of Annual Payments.

The annuity payments for the first year, including five months of the Dawes plan payment, will be 1,942,000,000 gold marks (about $463,196,000). In the second year, from April 1, 1930, to April 1, 1931, the payment will be 1,708,000,000 marks; third year, 1,685,000,000 marks; fourth year, 1,738,000,000 marks; fifth year, 1,804,800,000 marks; sixth year, 1,867,000,000 marks; seventh year, 1,893,000,000 marks; eighth year, 1,940,000,000 marks; ninth year, 1,977,000,000; tenth year, 1,995,000,000.

The remaining 27 years will call for payments of more than 2,000,000,000 marks annually, increasing until the end of the first period of 37 years and seven months. The period runs from next September 1 to March 31, 1966. Deliveries in kind the first year will be 700,000,000 marks (about $166,600,000), and will decline in value each year for ten years, after which they will cease entirely.

The unconditional payments which Germany must make the first year amount to 660,000,000 marks (about $146,606,000). This sum will be increased gradually.

Other Points To Be Settled.

The entire sum which Germany must pay under the compromise plan, which calls for two periods, totaling more than 58 years duration, is about $8,808,000,000. The unconditional payments represent the sums which Germany is required to pay in foreign currencies, which will be covered by commercialization.

The delegates hope to have the remaining points in their final report cleared up by the end of the week, permitting the American delegates to sail for home by Saturday. If this proves impossible, the Americans are confident of leaving by next Wednesday.

The final points to be ironed out include the question of allowing Germany the necessary credits for priority over allied liens on German railroads, which is favored by the allied experts; the question of payment of part of reparations by succession states to the old Austria-Hungary Empire, such as Roumania, Jugoslavia and others, which is of a political nature and probably will be referred to the governments, and the German request for a two-year internal moratoriom, which is most difficult, but not believed to be a permanent obstacle to agreement.

Navy Pact Stripped U. S., Bullard Says

General Demands Adequate Preparedness in Memorial Day Speech.

Rye, N. Y., May 30 (U.P.).—Declaring the United States had disarmed itself in an "international poker game" while other nations were being armed, Maj. Gen. Robert Lee Bullard urged the maintenance of an Army and Navy adequate to defend the Nation against any aggressor in a Memorial Day address today.

"Today we are relying on international conferences to save us from the trouble of preparedness," Gen. Bullard said. "An international conference is a poker game. Our naval international disarmament conference disarmed us, armed some other countries and now has frightened our country back into Navy building by way of the fifteen-cruiser bill.

"We have heard much of arbitration as a means of securing rights without war, the World Court and sometimes other means and courts to carry out their decision.

"Plainly, the lesson of the men we honor today, those who fought our wars, is preparedness, if we wish to transmit to our children the fine heritage turned over to us."

Boy, 9, Dies When Hit By Flaming Lacquer Pail

Norfolk, Va., May 30 (A.P.).—A bucket of flaming lacquer tossed by a mechanic from a garage window here proved fatal today to Raymond Lee Wood, 9, who had just rushed from the garage at the discovery of the blaze. Enveloped in fire, the boy, witnesses said, ran nearly 100 yards before he fell fatally burned.

Houston Oil Man Slays Wife and Self

Brother of Dead Woman Tells of Disagreement Between Pair.

Fort Worth, Tex., May 30 (A.P.).—Arthur Sayers, 59 years old, prominent oil man of Houston, Tex., shot and killed his 29-year-old wife here early today and then ended his own life. The slayings occurred at the home of Roger Q. Williams, secretary-treasurer of the Orbit Oil Co., a brother of Mrs. Sayers.

Williams testified at a coroner's inquest this morning that he and Mrs. Williams had retired for the night, leaving the Sayers in the living room. Shortly afterward several shots were heard. Mrs. Sayers staggered into the bedroom and fell dead.

"I ran into the front room and saw Sayers shoot himself," said Williams. Sayers died almost instantly.

Sayers came to Fort Worth in an attempt to persuade his wife to return to him. Two weeks ago Mrs. Sayers left Houston to play in a golf tournament in Dallas. At the end of the tournament she came here to visit her brother.

She wrote a letter to her husband Tuesday informing him that she did not intend to return to Houston.

Columbia, S. C., May 30 (A.P.).—Even hungry babies that cry in the night have their advantages. For instance, when Strother Sligh, chief of police of Eauclaire, a suburb, got up in the wee hours this morning to walk his wailing infant, he found the entire house in flames.

Chief Sligh, discovering the hallway on fire, lowered his wife, an older child and the baby that saved their lives through a window. The roof fell in just as he made his own exit.

2,700-Foot Fall Fatal To Parachute Jumper

Scranton, Pa., May 30 (A.P.).—Edgar R. (Red) Enochs, 22, parachute jumper, was hurtled 2,700 feet from the wing of an airplane to his death in a stunt exhibition at the Ackerly Speedway dirt track motor races today.

The rings on his parachute had "fouled" as he swung into space. Close to 3,000 spectators witnessed the fatal plunge.

Winds Still Balk Atlantic Flights

Near Gales and Squalls Are Reported; Planes Kept on Beach.

Old Orchard, Me., May 30 (A.P.).—Capt. Lewis A. Yancey, navigator of the Green Flash, said tonight he and Pilot Roger Q. Williams would not take off for Rome tomorrow, because of extremely poor conditions over the North Atlantic.

Capt. Yancey's announcement came after receipt of a detailed weather report from Dr. James H. Kimball, Government meteorologist, at New York. According to his report, increasing southeasterly winds prevailed across the ocean. In some places these winds approached gale force. He also mentioned rain squalls. His report concluded with the advice "conditions do not justify a take off Friday."

The Paris-bound Yellow Bird also was held at the beach by the same weather bureau bulletin. Armeno Lotti, leader of the flight, was in New York, conferring with Dr. Kimball, and the activities of his associates, Jean Assolant and Rene Le Fevre, were directed to preparing the big Bernard monoplane for a test flight tomorrow.

FRENCH DEBT REPLY FORWARDED TO U.S.

Note Says Formal Ratification Is Impossible at This Time, Report.

IS DISCUSSED BY CABINET

Paris, May 30 (U.P.).—The French reply to a United States note asking assurance that France intends to ratify the Berenger-Mellon war debt accord was completed today and transmitted to the French Embassy in Washington for delivery to Secretary Stimson.

It is understood the French reply confirms Foreign Minister Briand's previous communications on the war debt subject, announcing the government has placed the American and British accords before Parliament for ratification, but that in view of the reparations situation and the domestic political developments Premier Poincare can not formally assure ratification.

The American note had indicated that collection of $400,000,000 due in August on French purchases of war stocks might be postponed if ratification was assured.

The cabinet discussed the note and the situation created by the decision of a group of deputies to vote against the accord. Premier Poincare is said to be convinced that most of the doubtful deputies will vote favorably when the time comes.

FUQUA'S PROMOTION LINKED WITH ENOCHS

Colonel's Court-Martial Called Result of Protest on Elevation of Officer.

TRIAL TO BE HELD MONDAY

New York, May 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Army officers at Governors Island today professed to see a connection of the criticism aroused by the recent elevation of Col. Stephen O. Fuqua to be a major general with the court-martial ordered for Col. Berkeley Enochs, former chief of staff of this area, which is scheduled to start Monday, with all eyes in the Army focussed on the proceedings.

The exact charges against Col. Enochs, which were preferred by Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely, in command of the Second Corps Area, with headquarters at Governors Island, have not been made public. It is reported they deal under the general heading of "insubordination." Col. Enochs is the ranking officer on Gen. Ely's staff.

Where the connection is between the pending charges and the storm of open and veiled criticism attending the promotion of Col. Fuqua to be chief of infantry with the rank of major general, was not offered by any of the few officers willing to discuss the affair. But they insisted that when the court is thrown open the charges will be found to have some connection with the Governors Island protest against Col. Fuqua.

Promoted Over 165 Others.

Col. Fuqua was promoted over 165 colonels outranking him in seniority. Seniority is the second religion of the Army, officers say, and the taking of a colonel so far down on the list caused much bitterness among most of the officers passed over. Protests were made to the War Department and the Senate committee on military affairs to no avail. Col. Fuqua's appointment, a temporary one, was confirmed May 4.

Among the Fuqua protestants, it is reported, was Col. Enochs. Some time before the Senate approved the promotion an anonymous circular was distributed on Governors Island decrying the elevation. Copies reached the press. Later the War Department made an investigation, but its outcome was never made known. Col. Enochs, however, has never been linked with distribution of the circular.

The circular charged the selection of Col. Fuqua to be a major general came "as a shock to the Army." In no uncertain terms the document set forth that the promotion was decided on a basis of "personal friendship between the colonel and Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall."

Not a West Pointer.

Further, it was pointed out, Col. Fuqua was not a graduate of West Point. Then the circular charged the colonel's record was "neither brilliant nor unusual, nor is it comparable in its results with many of the colonels over whom he had been placed as chief."

Washington officials announced they found nothing out of the ordinary in the promotion, and the affair quieted down. But not on Governors Island, it was learned yesterday, or among many of the colonels who outranked Col. Fuqua in seniority.

Col. Enochs, who has a distinguished record and stood fifty-fourth on the list of colonels for promotion, was reported to have been somewhat more outspoken than the rest.

Fist Shaken, Says Report.

One report had Col. Enochs in a heated argument with Gen. Ely about three weeks ago, in which the colonel lost his temper and shook his fist at the general. That situation, say Army officers, is possible, but very unlikely. The punishment for striking a superior officer or attempting to strike one doubtless would be much more severe than for anything save treason, Army officers said.

No official information could be obtained at Governors Island today. Gen. Ely was reported away from the office, and Col. Enochs, said to be under arrest at his quarters, could not be reached.

Col. C. W. Exton, of the Chemical Warfare Service, named defense counsel for Col. Enochs, said tonight he has not been officially notified of the appointment and hence could not make a statement.

'Speed' Holman Wins $5,500 And Gardner Plane Trophy

St. Paul Aviator Makes 156 Miles an Hour in Midwest Race.

Parks Airport, East St. Louis, Ill., May 30 (A.P.).—Charles W. (Speed) Holman, of St. Paul, flying at the rate of more than 156 miles an hour, led eight other fliers to the Indianapolis Speedway and return today to win the first Gardner Trophy race for commercial airplanes and a cash prize of $5,500. His time was 2 hours 58 minutes and 40 seconds for the 468-mile flight. He flew a Laird biplane powered with a Wright whirlwind engine.

Sydnor Hall, of St. Louis, flying a speed wing Travelair, won second prize of $400, finishing in 3 hours 15 minutes and 20 seconds. Arthur J. Davis, of East Lansing, Mich., in a Waco, was third, with time of 3 hours 20 minutes and 53 seconds.

Holman said he "pulled 'er wide open" and flew at an altitude of about 100 feet all the way. Holman established a record of 1,093 consecutive loops with an airplane in Minneapolis last year.

Six of the nine planes in the race were equipped with the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics' low-resistance cowling, said to add between 10 and 20 miles an hour to the speed.

John Wood, of Wausau, Wis., winner of the national reliability tour last fall, was fourth to finish. His time was 3 hours 22 minutes and 41 seconds. Earl Rowland, of Wichita, Kans., winner of the transcontinental race from New York to Los Angeles last year, was fifth in his "middle wing" Cessna. Stanley D. Stanton, also of Wichita, was sixth, and Dale Jackson, St. Louis, seventh.

Two of the starters came to grief. Marvin T. O'Dell, of Cincinnati, was forced to land at Ireland, Ind., because of torn fabric on the fuselage of his plane, and D. C. Warren, of San Francisco, landed 40 miles east of here. He did not give the reason.

CHARLES W. HOLMAN.

The trophy and cash prizes were given by Russell E. and Fred W. Gardner, who hope to make the Gardner Trophy race an annual airplane race classic.

A proposed attempt by Mrs. Phoebe Fairchild Omlie, of Memphis, Tenn., to break the women's altitude record was called off, Mrs. Omlie announcing that an official barograph could not be located.

SPILL FATAL TO SPENCE

martyrs who have sacrificed their lives in the interest of speed. Spence, unconscious and bleeding, was picked up and rushed to the hospital inside the monster racing grounds, but he died on the way. He never knew what hit him.

There was no suspension of the race when the word was flashed that Spence had died of his injuries. The other drivers, when they learned of Spence's misfortune, shook their heads grimly and continued their battle to win their share of the $100,000 prize.

Keech Enriched $40,000.

Keech, as a result of his victory, was enriched to the extent of about $40,000. He won $20,000 as first prize, $5,100 in lap prizes and the balance in cash prizes offered by accessory manufacturers. Today's race was Keech's second major competition. He finished fourth in the 1928 race, coming here after gaining fame by setting a new world's record of 207.55 miles an hour on the beach at Dayton Beach, Fla. Before that he was an unsung, small-time, dirt track driver around Philadelphia.

Keech, driving a rear drive car, was fourth at the first 50 miles, tenth at 100, seventh at 150, fifth at 200, third at 250 and second at the 300 and 350 mile marks, then he went into the lead and was never headed.

Misfortune descended on Lou Moore, of Los Angeles, whose car, piloted by a relief driver, was forced to stop with only 5 miles to go and with second place apparently clinched. Moore jumped into the car and started a mad dash on his last two laps, but a connecting rod burned out on the back stretch and he was forced to quit. The stop cost Moore exactly $10,000, second prize money.

Meyer's time for the five-century grind was 5:13:49:21, and Gleason, in third place, finished in 5:20:10:46.

Carl Marchese, a youthful Milwaukee, Wis., driver, finished fourth, while Speed Gardner, another Philadelphia driver, was fifth, and Fred Winnai, also of Philadelphia, sixth. Louis Chiron, of Paris, France, one of two foreign entries and 1928 European champion, finished seventh, with Billy Arnold, of Chicago, eighth. Cliff Bergere, of Los Angeles, was ninth, and Fred Frame, of Philadelphia, was awarded tenth place. He was flagged down without finishing.

Others Narrowly Escape Death.

Experts consider it miraculous that only one driver was killed. Cliff Woodbury, of Chicago, an audacious dirt track driver, narrowly escaped death when his car crashed into the northwest turn retaining wall on the third lap. Woodbury escaped with only a shaking-up and went back into the race as a relief driver. Jules Moriceau, the other French driver in the race, also was in a smash-up when his car turned over as he was finishing his 100th mile.

The car piloted by Deacon Litz ran off the track on the fifty-sixth lap at the time he was in the lead. It was so badly twisted that he was unable to resume. He won $4,900 in lap prizes, however.

Two other drivers also were in smash-ups and fortunately escaped.

The day was perfect for racing, but blistering hot for the spectators. It was a typical summer crowd that jammed the mile-long grandstands and packed the infield. The male spectators shed their coats in an effort to keep as cool as possible.

A furious pace was set for the first 50 miles, with Deacon Litz in his special, the same machine used by Louis Meyer in winning a year ago, out in front of the thundering brigade. His margin was less than a quarter of a lap, with Lou Moore in hot pursuit.

Leaders Bunched at Start.

It was a remarkably close race among the three leaders when the first century of the long grind had been reeled off. Litz still held command of the situation, but was only 27 seconds ahead of Moore, who in turn was in a nose and nose struggle with Louis Meyer. Only fifteen seconds separated these two. Babe Stapp had pushed his car from seventh to fourth place and he was followed by Leon Duray. Tony Gulotta was sixth and Jimmy Gleason had moved up to seventh.

At 150 miles Moore was out in front, with Louis Meyer closely following and Jimmy Gleason on the same lap in third position. Litz went out of the race shortly before this post had been reached. Frame had milled his way through the castor fumes from ninth to fifth place.

At 200 miles Meyer and Moore were in a neck and neck battle for the leadership, with the former having a slight advantage. Frame had moved up from fifth to third and Gleason was fourth, with Keech fifth. Kries followed, and in order were Winnai, Marchese, Gulotta and Farmer. The time was 1 hour 57 minutes 25 seconds and the average was 102.192 miles an hour.

Fifteen of the speeding machines were knocked out when the half-way mark had been reached and it was a nip and tuck blanket race for the leading positions. Less than 100 yards separated Frame, who was leading in his front drive car and Meyer. Keech was on the same lap in third place.

Meyer Leads at 300 Mark.

When 300 miles had been reached a strange coincidence was that the race numbers carried on the machines were heading procession exactly as their flashing numbers. Meyer, driving No. 1, was first; Keech, in No. 2, was second and Moore, in No. 3, was third. Meyer was approximately one lap out in front of Keech who was on the same lap as Moore. Frame in fourth place was three laps behind and Marchese in fifth position six laps in the rear.

Fifty more miles were clipped off without change in the leadership of the first three cars, Meyer leading Keech and Moore by a lap and a quarter. Frame still occupied fourth place and Marchese fifth.

A stop at the pits cost Meyer the lead between the 350 and 400 mile point. With 100 miles to go the order was Keech first, Moore second, Meyer third and Marchese fourth. For the first time during the race Chiron, the European champion, showed among the first ten. Nineteen of the speed creations had received solar plexus punches for one reason or another at the 400-mile mark, leaving only fourteen of the original starters in the field.

When 450 miles had been reached and it was a frantic dash for the rich legacy which went to the winner only 56 1-5 seconds separated Keech and Kloepfer, who had relieved Moore. They were a full two laps ahead of Meyer in third and Marchese in fourth was nine laps behind the leaders. Gleason was within gunshot of Marchese in fifth and Arnold was sixth. The other order was Winnai, Gardner, Chiron and Frame. The time was 4 hours 35 minutes 40.88 seconds, an average of 97.943 miles an hour. Then followed that heart-breaking finish.

"RABBLE" IS BLAMED IN COLLEGE RIOTING

Police Chief Holds Brown Students Were Mask for Town Rowdies.

21 PERSONS WERE HURT

Providence, R. I., May 30 (A.P.).—William F. O'Neil, superintendent of police, today laid the blame for last night's pitched battle between Brown University students and the authorities to "the lawless rabble outside of the collegians, who urged on a minority of rowdy students and then, knowing the students would be blamed, lambasted the police."

Officials of the university were noncommittal concerning the outbreak, in which 21 persons were injured by rocks or police riot sticks and two were shot, one a spectator and the other a student. Kenneth O. Mason, dean of freshmen, whose persuasive oratory broke up the student demonstration, said tonight that the university's investigation has not been completed.

With the exception of the two wounded victims and less than a half dozen students with minor injuries, all of those hurt in the affray had been released from the Rhode Island and Homeopathic Hospitals and the college infirmary by noon today.

Four Brown men arrested during the trouble were fined from $10 to $20 on charges of assault on police officers, breaking traffic lights or discharging firearms on the public highway.

Six other students arrested during the tumult were released this morning after having been detained at police headquarters all night without charges. John B. Baker, 54-year-old Oaklawn contractor, who never went to college, but developed "college spirit" during the confusion last night, was fined $2 and costs on a charge of revelling.

33 Dead, 100 Hurt In Argentine Quake

Two Villages Destroyed as Great Fissures Open in the Earth.

Buenos Aires, May 30 (U.P.).—Thirty-three persons are known to have been killed in an earthquake which struck the Mendoza area today, and repercussions of which were felt elsewhere.

Late tonight 100 injured had been reported. Many homes were in ruins.

The villages of Goudge and Villa Autel were destroyed, dispatches said, and heavy damage was done. In that area, as in the vicinity of Las Malvinas and El Escorial, the shocks opened great fissures in the earth, from which poured the boiling water.

Slight tremors were felt this afternoon, after the main shocks.

The earthquake has impeded communication between Argentina and Chile. Telegrams are delayed.

Federal Agent Carlos Borzani has left for the stricken area in a special relief train, which has been delayed by uptorn roads and railway tracks in the earthquake area.

trip to London might have something to do with Mrs. Rogers' business there.

It was also learned that the count had made arrangements for a long trip to South America, which, he told a friend, would combine business with pleasure. He expects to leave in July, visit Brazil and the Argentine, then return up the West Coast to San Francisco. He is taking his tennis racquets with him.

Mrs. Rogers' break with her husband, it was said, came about two years ago when their daughter, Millicent, came to Paris to get a divorce from Count Salm. She came to France about six weeks ago and has been living in a quiet hotel in the Champs-Elysees quarter while her apartment was being fitted up.

WOMEN'S CAMPAIGN ON SNOBBERY TOLD

Cuban Ambassador Outlines Drive to Bring the Two Americas Together.

COMMON IDEALS CITED

Swampscott, Mass., May 30 (A.P.).—Women's campaign to eliminate "snobbishness" from the Americas and to glorify the art and consciousness of the Western Hemisphere was outlined tonight by Dr. Orestes Ferrara, Ambassador of Cuba, in an address before the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

"American solidarity was created in the early days of liberty on this continent," said the Ambassador. "In both the American continents, a single ideal, one aspiration, stirred in the breasts of all. Those nations which achieved independence first aided the others.

"Then the strongest of all dictated to the world its famous doctrine; the liberty won at great sacrifice by America would not be lost except by the sacrifice of all America.

"The peoples of the south," he continued, "saw sanctioned, by the great people of the north, the right to be free, a right won at the cost of blood and tears.

"If Pan-Americanism receives the unflagging support of women's organizations; if it be nurtured by the heartening influence of the feminine soul, its purposes will be ennobled and it will be sanctified."

The Ambassador said there exists a certain snobbishness in the Americas which makes it difficult to bring together our social elements. "Both north and south," he added, "prefer to look to the ancient cradles of their traditions and of their ancestors rather than to the peoples nearer at hand. Knowing each other better would make this snobbishness disappear."

Man's Ribs Broken In Friendly Tussle

Philip Smith Is in Serious Condition After Picnic Wrestling.

While engaging in a friendly wrestling match yesterday on a picnic at Falls Church, Philip Smith, 30 years old, of 212 Simmons street southeast, suffered fractures of two ribs, one or both of which are believed to have punctured his lungs. His condition is serious, according to Dr. Leon Gordon, of Emergency Hospital, who treated him.

Dr. Gordon and the Emergency Hospital ambulance went to Falls Church in response to a call. The ambulance negotiated the trip with difficulty, the Washington-Falls Church boulevard being crowded with holiday traffic.

Smith is a clerk in the Veterans' Bureau. No information could be obtained last night as to the identity of the other wrestler. The picnic was said to have been under the auspices of a local fraternal organization.

NEW CHURCH MERGER IS VOTED AT DETROIT

Congregationalists Approve Combine With Christian Denomination.

LARGER UNIONS FORECAST

Detroit, May 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Members of the National Congress of the Congregational Churches in the United States, representing 5,500 churches in every State of the Union, today voted unanimously for a merger between the council and the General Convention of the Christian Church.

Following the vote, Dr. Warren H. Denison, of Dayton, Ohio, executive secretary of the Christian convention, who, with 21 other leading officers of his denomination, is here, told the council that he was sure the merger would be approved with an equally hearty and enthusiastic vote by the General Convention of the Christian Church when it meets in October in Piqua, Ohio.

This will be the first union of large, distinct denominations in the United States, and the hope was expressed in connection with the vote, both by Dr. Frank Knight Sanders, of Rockport, Mass., chairman of the Congregational commission on the interchurch relations, and formerly dean of the Yale Divinity School, and by Dr. Denison that it will lead to a still larger union of denominations.

The vote this morning was on the adoption of the first of five enabling resolutions which will be required to commit the Congregational Church to the merger. The vote authorized the merger of the two national denominational bodies. The next three resolutions will outline the procedures to be followed by the missionary societies, by the State conferences and by the executive committee of the national council. The fifth and final resolution, which will probably be adopted next Tuesday, will call for the adoption of the union as a whole, as set forth in the four preceding resolutions.

CARD PLAYER FOUND DEAD OF POISONING

New Yorker Leaves Table and Swallows Deadly Potion in Home of Friend.

SUICIDE THEORY IS HELD

New York, May 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Quitting a card game, Harry Ufland, 45, realty broker, swallowed poison early this morning in the apartment of a friend. Police tonight were trying to determine whether Ufland, who had been in failing health, committed suicide or accidentally swallowed the poison.

Ufland, playing with his brother, George, and Dr. Ralph Shastin, suddenly left the table and went into the bathroom of his friend's apartment. George, entering a few minutes later, found his brother lying on the floor. He called in Dr. Benjamin Alperin, who said Harry was dead. Dr. Alperin reported the case to the medical examiner's office. The body was taken to the morgue for an autopsy.

Later in the day, the medical examiner's office reported that analysis of the contents of the victim's stomach revealed the poison. For some unknown reason, police were not told of the death or that the body had been taken to the morgue for the autopsy. Detectives of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station first learned of the case from newspaper men.

George Ufland told Capt. Appel, in command of detectives at West Sixty-eighth Street Station, that his brother had suffered from extreme nervousness and had been unable to sleep. Capt. Appel said none of the poison used by Ufland was in the bathroom of the apartment, and that he investigated the death because of failure of the medical examiner's office to notify police.

4 Who Broke Jail Are Still at Large

Police Find No Trace of the Quartet Which Fled From Woodstock.

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 30.—Shenandoah County officers late today had found no trace of the four prisoners who sawed their way to freedom from the Woodstock Jail early yesterday morning. Two of the youths who escaped are from Harrisonburg—Alfred Kennedy and Lloyd Keckley. Kennedy only recently escaped from the State reformatory. The others gaining their freedom were Lester Strosnider, of Strasburg, and a youth named Kingan, of New Market, held for grand jury action on burglary cases.

Using a saw secreted to them through an outside window of the jail, the prisoners sawed their way out of the cell and then out of a window to make their way to freedom unmolested. This is the second jail escape from Woodstock in recent months, four previous prisoners gaining their freedom via an unused trap door. All were recaptured.

Chamberlin Plane Is Forced to Land

Transatlantic Flier and 3 Companions Become Confused Over Mountains.

Winchester, Va., May 30.—Clarence Chamberlin, transatlantic flier, made a forced landing here today with a Crescent eight-passenger plane en route from Bolling Field, Washington, to Indianapolis. Chamberlin and three companions left New York yesterday and spent the night at Washington.

They obtained airway maps and took off again for Indianapolis. Chamberlin and his companions said that although they had not planned stopping here, after all they were glad to have visited the home town of Commander Richard E. Byrd, with whom Chamberlin returned by steamer from his transatlantic flight.

"Chicago May" Dies on Eve Of Long-Awaited Wedding

Internationally Known Woman Crook, Who Rescued Eddie Guerin From Devils Island, Succumbs to Operation as Freed Sweetheart Plans Marriage.

Philadelphia, May 30 (U.P.).—"Chicago May" Churchill, internationally known underworld queen of twenty years ago, died in a Philadelphia hospital today with her life's greatest desire just before her.

Death found her with a clearer conscience than she had two decades ago. After spending fifteen years of the best part of her life in prison, she had decided to reform and had made a fair job of it.

But the final gesture toward respectability—marriage—was denied her. Charley Smith, for whom she waited fifteen years to get out of an English prison, was to have become her husband when she recovered from a delicate operation.

It was in 1902 that Chicago May established a two-continent reputation. She was a familiar figure about the big hotels of London and Paris, where wealthy Americans stopped. She had gone back to Europe and there had met Eddie Guerin, also known to police on both sides of the Atlantic, who at that time was a fugitive from the United States, wanted on bank robbery and other charges.

Guerin was young and handsome, and May fell hard. They teamed together and worked well, touring the smart Paris cafes looking for suckers and keeping alert for their big chance. Finally it came. Guerin cracked the safe in the American Express Co.'s office in Paris one night and escaped with $50,000 in cash. May helped him. They were just about to make their getaway when the French gendarmes found them.

Guerin was sent to Devil's Island, the remote penal colony in French Guiana, and May to a prison in France. Three years dragged by and May came out with only one thought—to get her lover out, too.

How she obtained money from friends, chartered a yacht and crew, went to Devil's Island and bribed guards to let Eddie escape is one of the most colorful episodes in criminal history.

But May no sooner had brought Guerin back to safety in England than she fell in love with another man, Robert Considine, alias Charles Smith. Guerin saw himself being jilted, and one night, as Charley and May were getting in a cab, he approached them. Fearing that he was about to attack May with a knife—for he had threatened to destroy her beauty—Smith shot him.

FEW WOMEN WANT TO BE PLANE PILOTS

Only 1 Per Cent of Sum Paid Teachers Comes From Weaker Sex.

180 EXPECTED IN 1929

(United Press.)

Something like $6,000,000 will be spent by budding young American aviators for flying instructions during the year 1929, and only 1 per cent of this total will come out of the purses of girls and women.

Figures at the Department of Commerce, aeronautical division, show that American women aren't taking to flying as might have been expected.

Unless all signs fail, 18,000 student pilots' permits will have been issued by the department during the current year, by the end of December, 1929. Similarly, unless all indications fail, only 180 of these permits will have been issued to the less air-minded sex.

Last week there were 500 of these permits issued, women getting 3 and men 497. This is less than 1 per cent, but the average issued to women is 1 per cent of the men's total. And only 57 women hold pilots' licenses from the department.

Each such license, officials figure, costs its holder approximately as much as a year in an average college; that is, about $1,000. A flier with a private pilot's license usually has studied flying for at least four months and has been up in the air 16 to 25 hours, 8 to 10 hours in solo flying and 8 to 15 hours under dual instruction. Each hour's instruction costs $15 to $30.

In addition, at practically all flying fields, when a student graduates from dual control to solo flying, he or she must make a $250 deposit to guarantee the field against loss in case the plane used is damaged.

If all the student fliers who begin taking lessons this year should continue until they earn a private pilot's license, the cost of their instruction would be $18,000,000. But only 15 to 20 per cent keep on; the others drop out, and this percentage holds good for women as well as men.

California leads all other States in its total number of licensed pilots—1,100. New York has about half that many, Illinois 300, Ohio 266, and Texas 242.

H. J. H. Dyer, the Liberal, polled 6,395.

Suspected Killer of Girl Arrested and Guarded

Ukiah, Calif., May 30 (A.P.).—Tom Lehew, suspected slayer of 6-year-old Teresa Johnson, was arrested at his home south of Fort Bragg today and brought to the county jail for safekeeping. Rumors of violence or summary vengeance to any one taken as a suspect led to Lehew's detention and quick removal to the jail, said Sheriff R. R. Byrnes. So secret was the move that residents of Mendocino County generally were unaware of the arrest, and William Callahan, stepfather of Lehew, said he knew only that the man had been "taken away."

Sheriff Byrnes said tonight he would await a recheck of evidence by E. O. Heinrich, Berkeley criminologist, before filing charges.

KELLOGG PACT WINS PRAISE OF COOLIDGE

Is Greatest Moral Force for Peace Ever Created, Says Former President.

CITES FAILURE OF WARS

Philadelphia, May 30 (A.P.).—Former President Calvin Coolidge, writing in the June issue of Ladies' Home Journal on "Promoting Peace Through Renunciation of War," declares that the Kellogg multilateral peace treaty "is the greatest moral force dedicated to peace which has ever been created."

The treaty, he said, can not be used as a substitute for national defense, but only as a supplement.

"As the nations come to place a proper reliance on this covenant," writes the former President, "many suspicions will be dissipated. It has been customary for them to watch each other very closely, in some cases even to spy upon each other, in order to learn what military measures were being taken. This was always with the thought that such measures might indicate a hostile intent. If a nation was supporting an army and navy barely necessary for domestic and international police purposes, it was under the suspicion of preparing for aggression against its neighbor.

"With the adoption of the peace treaty this condition should disappear, so that the people of one country will have no more suspicions concerning the military forces of another country than the people of New York have concerning the police force of Chicago or Montreal.

"Throughout all its history the human race has been cursed with war. To condemn war in its entirety it is not necessary to discuss it on moral grounds, as it stands as a complete failure economically.

"One of the greatest obstacles to human progress is fear. It is most frequently and most correctly described as paralyzing. It at once arrests and destroys effort. In the opposite direction lies courage. In so far as any declaration could do so, the Kellogg treaty will alleviate the fear which nations have of each other. It at the same time will enlarge their faith and enlarge their courage. It is the birth of a new freedom.

"With adequate force to provide for national defense, with a limitation of armaments to end international competition, and with a renunciation of war as a future policy, the peace of the world is established upon the firmest possible foundation."

Lady Astor Breaks Down When Victory Is Assured

Plymouth, England, May 31 (Friday) (U.P.).—Lady Astor won her hotly contested battle for reelection to the House of Commons this morning, but she finally broke under the strain of excitement.

The American-born member of Parliament, who has worked with relentless vigor throughout the campaign to meet the opposition of Laborites in her constituency, had tears in her eyes when she entered the vote-counting room at midnight. She had been told that she was victorious by a small margin, 211 votes.

She admitted that she had expected a larger plurality, but added:

"Still I am going to Westminster and not back to Virginia, as my opponents predicted. I have been fighting liquor interests and I would rather go to prison instead of Parliament than support the liquor trade."

S. Saklatvala, the only Communist member of Parliament, was defeated for reelection in Battersea, North division, by W. D. Sanders, former secretary of the Fabian Society and a Laborite.

Boy Struck by Golf Ball Dies of Fractured Skull

New York, May 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Adolph Sodowski, 12, of Ozone Park, Queens, a caddy on the public golf links in Forest Park, Richmond Hill, died of a skull fracture today a short time after being struck in the left eye by a golf ball.

The ball was driven by Salem Smith, a retail dairy merchant of Jackson Heights. Smith was not arrested, but said he would be in Jamaica Police Court tomorrow when the case is laid before the magistrate.

Smith, one of a foursome, had reached the fourth hole and teed off. Four caddies were standing on the green in the direction of his shot, about 50 yards away, police said, and he shouted the usual warning before taking his second stroke. He ran to the boy's side when he saw the ball hit him, and helped carry him to the golf house. An ambulance was sent from Mary Immaculate Hospital, Jamaica, but the boy died before he could reach it.

Peruvian Aviators Land in Alabama

Pair, Flying From Capital, Fail to Reach New Orleans by Night.

Montgomery, Ala., May 30 (U.P.).—The Peruvian fliers, Lieut. Carlos Zegarra and Capt. Carlos Martinez de Pinillos, landed at Maxwell Field here at 4 p. m. today on the second leg of their flight from Washington to Peru. They plan to take off for New Orleans at between 8 and 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The fliers left Richard Byrd Field, Richmond, Va., at 10:31 a. m. Eastern standard time, for New Orleans today, but decided to land here when they feared there was insufficient time to complete the hop during daylight. They expect to reach New Orleans in about three hours after the take-off tomorrow.

The take-off at Richmond was delayed three hours by bad weather.

Red Shirt Is Ostracized As Menace by Railroad

Chicago, May 30 (A.P.).—Working on the railroad can never be the same again, the red flannel shirt has been ostracized. By official order of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad this venerable emblem of the section hand's art has been consigned to oblivion, along with the mustache cup, peg-top trousers and three-handed euchre.

"Because of the possibility of being mistaken for signals," the road's order reads, "wearing of red clothing about the right-of-way is forbidden."

TARIFF BILL "JOKER" BARS CLASSIC BOOKS

Protests Are Made Against Customs Censorship Over "Seditious" Volumes.

HEAVY PENALTY PROVIDED

A section in the new tariff bill which would extend the literary censorship powers of customs officials gave promise yesterday of involving the Hoover administration in an academic squabble.

It has been discovered that the measure passed by the House last week and now before the Senate finance committee would give customs authorities the right to exclude from this country foreign literature of a "seditious" character. Heretofore, they have had power under the tariff law to exclude only "obscene" works.

How the new provision got into the bill is something of a mystery. It was not mentioned in the House debates and Chairman Hawley, of the ways and means committee, which drafted the measure, has said he does not remember who proposed the change.

There had been no suspicion that the measure involved more than crass commercialism until the National Popular Government League discovered the change in section 305 and began calling it to the attention of the literati.

Response Immediate and Vociferous.

The response was immediate and vociferous. Yesterday the league made public an indignant protest against the proposed change in the law by Prof. Zechariah Chafee, jr., of Harvard, an authority on laws affecting literature. He declared section 305 "an effective censorship over foreign literature."

He predicted this portion of the bill, if enacted, would be interpreted by unenlightened customs officials to exclude the works of such thinkers as Marx, Proudhon, Bakunin and Stirner. It might even be invoked, he said, against a book like Bertrand Russell's "Proposed Roads to Freedom," which enjoyed a wide circulation in this country. Chafee characterized the work as "one of the sanest discussions of contemporary thought."

"This law will not merely prevent the importation of important books printed abroad, but also will indirectly stop the printing of such books by our own publishers since they will be unable to obtain the necessary sheets of the book from abroad for use in setting up the type here," Chafee said.

Cites Barring of Candide.

To support his contention that customs officials would exclude classics as well as modern works which might be of no particular value, he cited the recent barring of "Candide," the Voltaire classic, which has been protested by several of this country's foremost bibliophiles.

"This law is a kindergarten measure, which assumes that the American people are so stupid and so untrustworthy that it is unsafe to let them read anything about revolutions because they would immediately become converts," Chafee continued.

"If this legislation is to be enforced with any impartiality, it must necessarily cut us off from the economic and political thought of Europe and the rest of the world in our own time. This Nation can not pass its existence for the next score of years like some lady of Shalott, shut off from the turbulent life of European mankind."

Provides Fine and Imprisonment.

The bill provides a maximum penalty of $5,000 fine, two years imprisonment, or both, for violating the section prohibiting importation of obscene or treasonable works, and customs officials are given absolute and final authority to decide what books come under these classifications.

Among the works now barred as obscene are the Confessions of Rosseau, Balzac's Ten Droll Stories, Boccaccio's Decameron, Letters of Abelard and Heloise, Carco's Perversity, the German scientific work, Psychopathic Sexualis; the unexpurgated edition of Arabian Nights, and medical views on birth control.

It seems apparent from Chaffee's reaction to the "joker" that President Hoover will be besieged with protests from academic and liberal sources to ask its elimination from the bill in the senate. On the other hand, the Watch and Ward Society and similar organizations are expected to be just as insistent that the provision remain in the measure.

The issue may relegate to secondary importance even the controversial sugar tariff and impart a literary tone to the tariff fight.

KING GEORGE SUFFERS RELAPSE OF ILLNESS

of physicians and specialists who attended the king previously.

It was believed his majesty contracted a cold last Sunday, when he attended a tea party in the open air at the Windsor Castle grounds.

Despite the setback in the king's recovery, hope was expressed in royal circles that his majesty would be able to attend the thanksgiving services at Westminster Abbey June 16.

According to the recently published announcement the service will be "In thanksgiving to Almighty God for His good providence whereby our most gracious sovereign has been delivered from his severe illness to the comfort of the whole realm and for a signal of love and loyalty of his people made manifest in time of trouble."

It also was recalled that the king issued his memorable message of gratitude for his recovery last April 23. That letter prompted the inauguration of a "thanksgiving fund" for his recovery which has brought about a great sum to hospitals.

Sir Stanley Hewett is at Windsor Castle in attendance on King George. Lord Dawson had not been expected to return to England for at least a week until he suddenly arrived by airplane from Paris this afternoon.

The Prince of Wales and the Duke of York were informed by telephone of his majesty's condition.

It is understood that Lord Dawson proceeded directly to Windsor Castle.

An eminent British physician expressed the opinion that King George's setback had no relation whatever to his previous illness.

"It would not be the cause of or affected by the present setback," he said. "Anyway, his present condition may be due to a mere chill to which any one is liable."

The Daily News, however, will recall in its Friday issue the similarity of the present illness with the start of the serious illness of last winter, which was first called "a common cold."

"While the course of events must not be viewed with apprehension," the newspaper will say, "we may reasonably hope this time that the lung is not involved and that there will be no question of microbes entering into the blood stream."

Although no official announcement was made tonight, the news of his majesty's setback quickly leaked out and cast a shadow over the general election excitement.

VANCOUVER PROVIDES TRACE OF ESCOBAR

Man, Believed to Be Fleeing Mexican Chief, Lived There Recently.

FLOWERS FILLED SUITE

Vancouver, B. C., May 30 (Canadian Press).—In the most luxurious suite of the Hotel Georgia, surrounded by the most expensive flowers money could buy, a man, belived to have been Gen. J. Gonzalo Escobar, fleeing leader of the recent Mexican revolution, lived for three days, May 15, 16 and 17, it was learned today.

The man left the hotel on May 17, accompanied by a family of four and his secretary, who was believed to have been Pedro Alvarez. It was reported they left Vancouver by automobile.

In recent days four Mexicans have arrived in Vancouver, and although they denied connection with their government, rumors persisted they were secret service men on the trail of the former revolutionary leader.

The arrival of the mysterious Mexican at the hotel was preceded by a visit from his secretary, who reserved the best suite available. By arrangement made by the secretary the rooms occupied by the Mexican visitor and his family were flooded with flowers. The party gave the impression of having plenty of money.

When the secretary registered at the hotel for himself and his principal he gave no address. The clerk asked for his address and the reply was "Oh, the last place we were in was Seattle." The clerk then filled in that address.

While the group was in Vancouver a party of Mexicans inquired for information about British Columbia roads at the automobile club. They did not indicate which direction they proposed to travel.

Venezuela Chooses Perez as President

Succeeds Gen. Gomez, Who Becomes Commander of Nation's Army.

Caracas, Venezuela, May 30 (A.P.).—Dr. Juan Bautista Perez, president of the federal high court of cassation and temporary president of Venezuela, was elected president of the republic by congress today. He was chosen for the seven-year term expiring in 1936.

Dr. Perez will succeed Gen. Juan Vicente Gomez, who surprised the country on May 4 by declining reelection to the post which he had held for 20 years. This unexpected development caused delay in filling the office of chief executive until today.

Gen. Gomez expressed a willingness to become commander in chief of the Venezuelan army, and congress today carried out that wish by choosing him for that post.

Dr. Perez will take the oath of office before congress tomorrow morning.

Tariff Bill Termed Call for Women

New Jersey Representative Says It Will Arouse Entire Sex.

(Associated Press.)

Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, one of the eight women in the House of Representatives, believes the new tariff bill "will do more to force women into politics than all the academic discussions of the past, present and future."

Describing the measure as a "challenge to every housewife in the country," Mrs. Norton in a statement yesterday declared that if the bill becomes a law "we are going to find everything we eat, drink and wear selling at a price beyond the means of the average woman."

Pointing out that Representative Pearl Peden Oldfield (Democrat), of Arkansas, and herself were the only women in the House to vote against the tariff bills, Mrs. Norton predicted that "women are not going to sit back and permit 264 men and women to take from their children and their table the necessities of life and try to make us believe it is to benefit the farmer.

Izaak Walton Head Dies.

Chicago, May 30 (A.P.).—Fred H. Doellner, general manager of the Izaak Walton League of America and an active conservationist, died last night after an illness of several months. He was 42 years old.

Mr. Fix is a handy man to do the little odd job you've been putting off doing from day to day. You'll find his address and telephone number among today's advertisements in the "Personals" classification of The Post.

Lindberghs Still In Secret Haven

Couple Completes Third Day in Seclusion as Mystery Holds.

New York, May 30 (U.P.).—The Charles A. Lindberghs successfully ended the third day of their honeymoon seclusion today with their whereabouts remaining as complete a mystery as ever. Throughout the day curious holiday crowds roamed about the entrance to the Dwight W. Morrow estate at Englewood, N. J., where the couple are reported hiding, but they could catch no glimpse of the famous aviator and his bride.

Some friends of the couple believed they might have succeeded in reaching the Morrow home at North Haven, Me., but there was no definite news on which to base the theory.

Schenectady, N. Y., May 30 (U.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's plane, which has been at the airport here since Tuesday, was a real honeymoon ship today. Despite the vigilance of guards, wags bedecked the plane with old shoes, tin cans and other traditional wedding tokens. The blue and gold ship also was inscribed with wedding "wise cracks" in white paint.

ON THE RAGGED EDGE.

If the Republicans of Congress will pay a little more attention to their party's pledges and a little less to premature vacation plans they will stand a better chance of reelection.

During the last six weeks Congress has practically destroyed public confidence in the Republican party. The people still have full faith in President Hoover's good intentions, but the rosy anticipations of wonderful achievements under his leadership are fast disappearing, as it is now evident that the Republican party in Congress contains traitors within its ranks who are determined to wreck the party and the Hoover administration. The combination of Democrats and Republican traitors in the Senate constitutes a majority that can bring to naught all the well-laid plans of the Republican President in behalf of farm relief, and a tariff revision that would commend itself to the country.

Unless this combination breaks or is broken, the debenture feature will remain in the farm relief bill or will appear in the tariff bill. President Hoover will be compelled to veto any bill in which it appears. Then good-by to farm relief or tariff revision, and good-by to public confidence in the Republican party as manager of the Government.

The wave of public disgust over the situation in Congress is almost unprecedented. When Mr. Hoover was placed in command by the votes of nearly all the States the people expected Congress to support him in bringing about immediate farm relief and reasonable tariff revision. He is getting neither, and it is not his fault. The public knows that it is not his fault. Hence there is rising a storm of popular wrath against Congress, which is very likely to destroy good men as well as bad as it strikes blindly at the frustraters of prosperity. Republicans who support the party pledges are in danger, as well as the traitors who have violated the pledges.

The world's oversupply of wheat is bringing another disaster to American farmers, at the very moment when Congress is failing to provide farm relief. Agriculture distress is the forerunner of industrial depression and the general collapse of prosperity. Labor is involved. The Republicans of Congress are bereft of reason if they think they can escape retribution at the next election, individually and as a party. If congressional elections were to be held today the House of Representatives would be made Democratic, not because the people have gone Democratic but because they feel that they have been betrayed by the Republicans.

The suggestion that Congress should take a recess until fall, without enacting farm relief or tariff revision, is sheer madness. Both of these measures must be enacted, and they must be fairly satisfactory, or the Republican party may as well kiss good-by to its control of Congress. The danger is that the majority party will fail to enact satisfactory legislation, either now or in the autumn. This failure would not merely break the hold of the Republican party—it would imperil national prosperity. The people will not stand for this unnecessary and suicidal destruction of their prosperity by politicians who refuse to do teamwork in the public interest.

The Republicans in Congress—all of them, loyal and traitor—were never in greater danger than they are at present. A little more juggling with the public welfare, a little more dissension and party treachery, and the betrayed farmers, industrialists, and workers of the United States will do the rest.

A CHALLENGE TO THE LIVING.

President Hoover's Memorial Day address voices the inward sentiments of Americans toward those who have sacrificed their lives in battle. No more appropriate tribute can be paid to our heroic dead, said Mr. Hoover, than to stand in the presence of their resting places and pledge renewed effort that these sacrifices shall not be claimed again. His words recall those of Lincoln at Gettysburg, when he asked Americans to resolve "that these dead shall not have died in vain."

In memorializing the Nation's soldier dead there is no thought of glorifying war. They are honored by the people because of the part they played in reestablishing peace. The objective of fighting is to make peace secure with honor. President Hoover referred to the signing of the Kellogg pact by 40 nations since last Memorial Day as evidence of the abandonment of the aggressive use of arms and a declaration that hereafter armaments will be used only for defense. Nevertheless, he pointed out, preparations for war are advancing in every land, and he emphasized the importance of an agreement among nations "that we shall march together toward reductions in naval equipment."

Fear and suspicion will never slacken, the President said, unless there is a halt in competitive armament. National defense is a primary obligation of every nation, an assurance against aggression. But national defense is a relative problem. The vital need is for a "rational yardstick" by which naval strength may be measured, so that all nations can make reductions and still maintain their relative defensive power. The Hoover administration is undertaking to develop such a measuring rod, and there is reason to believe that progress is being made.

President Hoover's statement of progress toward outlawry of war and limitation of armaments was clear and brief. Increasing preparedness for war in spite of its renunciation of the Kellogg pact constitutes a challenge to the naval authorities of the world. No more appropriate subject could engage the attention of the millions of Americans paying tribute to their war dead. "Nothing less than our resolve to give ourselves with equal courage to the ideal of our day," the President said, "will serve to manifest our gratitude for their sacrifices, our undying memory of their deeds, our emulation of their glorious example."

PUBLIC UTILITY COMMISSIONERS.

The Senate has confirmed the nominations of Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick and Harleigh H. Hartman as members of the Public Utilities Commission. As soon as the new commissioners are formally inducted into office the commission will once again be a functioning body. Many important matters directly affecting the District pocketbook press for attention. The public has implicit faith in the ability of the new commission to attend to the problems as they arise, solving them in fairness to both public and corporations.

The most important matters awaiting action concern valuation. The telephone company, the street railways and the gas company have such cases pending upon the result of which depend the rates which the public will have to pay for telephone service, transportation and gas. The new commission should adopt a uniform method of accounting, a task which may be somewhat easier now that the Supreme Court, through the O'Fallon decision, has specified the factors that enter into the valuation of public utilities.

The new commission has the best wishes of the public and of the corporations as it enters upon its difficult task. It is to be hoped that the commission will bring about an era of cooperation and understanding between the public and the public service corporations.

THE CENSUS BILL.

The Senate attached a silly condition to the census bill when it provided that enumerators should be placed under the civil service. The Civil Service Commission can not examine applicants and make up a list of eligibles except by a great expenditure of time and money, and the eligibles thus selected would be no more capable than other persons, if indeed they were as capable. No special qualifications are required for accurate census enumeration. A good character and a reputation for honest and careful work are sufficient.

In the interest of expedition and economy the House should disagree to the Senate amendment and insist that the civil service nonsense shall be stricken from the bill.

Congress places itself in a poor light when it enacts a law that actually contemplates its failure and refusal to reapportion the House. The bill provides that if Congress shall not pass a reapportionment bill during the session following the census enumeration, the President may proclaim a reapportionment based upon the "major fractions" formula. However, in view of the failure of Congress to perform its duty in maintaining a just and equal representation of the people in the House of Representatives, it may be just as well to delegate that duty to some one who will perform it. The Government must go on, and it is desirable that one of its great branches, the House of Representatives, should not be a fraudulent body.

PROHIBITION STILL STANDS.

The repeal of the Wisconsin State prohibition enforcement act, which became law when it received the signature of Gov. Kohler last Wednesday, should have little practical effect. In his message to the Assembly, the governor pointed out that the eighteenth amendment, the Volstead law and the Jones law still will be in effect in Wisconsin, and that it will continue to be a crime to manufacture, sell or transport alcoholic beverages, but he called attention to the fact that enforcement will depend on Federal and local effort, "as it has largely in the past." With no State enforcement law, however, conditions in Wisconsin may become like conditions in New York, Maryland, Montana and Nevada. Where there is no State enforcement law, Federal authorities find themselves well-nigh unable to cope with conditions.

So far as national prohibition is concerned, the Wisconsin repeal is an empty gesture. Four States have repealed or have refused to enact State enforcement laws, and the wets point to these four as the nucleus around which national repeal will be built. Quite aside from the question whether these four States would vote for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, were that question put to a vote, stands the fact that 32 additional States would have to act against the constitutional provision were it to be repealed. At this stage of the experiment, it seems absolutely impossible that 32 States could be found to agree to any such proposal.

In the meantime Wisconsin's experiment will bear watching. For a while it may be expected that Federal authorities will wage drastic warfare on prohibition law violations in Wisconsin, but sooner or later it will be found that without a State enforcement law it is impossible to stem the flow of liquor. Wisconsin possibly may become another oasis in a theoretically arid land, much as is New York City, but in a national sense the repeal of the State enforcement act will have no effect.

GREAT BASEBALL PLAYERS

By FREEMAN CLEAVES.
In the New York Times.

What makes a great baseball player? Few games other than his require such a high degree of physical exertion combined with manual skill. The base-runner needs all the speed he can muster as, at intervals, does the outfielder. The batter must be able to hit a fast ball nine inches in circumference with a round stick not more than two and three-fourth inches in diameter at the thickest part. The infielders must learn to throw as well as to catch a ball from all positions. And upon the skill and cunning of the pitcher's arm rests the fate of every ball club.

Carrying out one of his pet theories while manager of the old Chicago Cubs, Frank Chance said he could discover how rapidly a man could think by watching him in a poker game, and thus save the expenses of carrying some player for months only to have him lose a game through failure in a crucial moment. But whether a man thinks while playing poker has been a moot question. Baseball stars who have developed a high degree of skill appear to know what to do in emergencies through instinctive action. The less a ball player has to think on the diamond, the greater natural genius he is.

Most of the "thinking" in baseball is done before or after the game or on the bench. For not only the pitcher and catcher, but the entire team must know the weakness of every opponent and his temperament and personality, in order to discover what he might do in a given situation. Pitchers and catchers catalogue the weakness of every batter; they also know how far each base-runner may leave any base and get back safely. The infielders and outfielders shift their positions for different batters when a certain pitcher is in the box, and make different shifts for these same batters against other pitchers.

Much of the strategy of the game is, as a rule, plotted out before the players take the field. On the diamond the pitcher and catcher, together with members of the infield, may devise plays for trapping a hitter or runner. But during the active moments of the game, fewer brilliant plays are brought about through deliberate thought than by means of the superb physical coordination which is responsible for Babe Ruth's home runs. Ruth does not have to "dope" the pitcher; he has him on the defensive. And the twirler has to figure what to pitch to Ruth.

Many examples of alleged quick thinking on the diamond are actually improvisations born of well-drilled action. The smart base-runner, as he dashes for the bag, watches the expression on the second baseman's face to ascertain in a split second how much time he has before the infielder catches the ball. Learning this, he will know whether or not he has to slide, and if so what kind of a slide to make. The smart second-sacker, realizing that the runner is using him for a coach, will appear unconcerned until he brings his hands together suddenly and puts the ball on the runner.

The smart outfielder, to whom is given a long drive to chase with a man on first base, picks up the ball on the bounce and wheels to throw to third. If he has no chance to catch the runner, he may, without changing his arm motion, wheel and shoot the ball to second. If, with a slow runner on second base, the outfielder comes in at full tilt to get a ball on the first bounce, he may outguess the hitter, who has turned first with the intention of sprinting to second, and catch him standing still 10 feet from the base.

Another example of "quick thinking," where the right play is "felt" rather than thought out, may be found in the instance of the second baseman who fumbles an infield grounder with a man on second. The infielder quickly recovers the ball, but the batter is a fast runner. The momentary muff has spoiled the play at first; he has no time to catch the hitter, so the baseman throws to third. If the runner has gone past the bag and hesitated to see if the ball has rolled to the outfield, he will be caught. A big leaguer who once made this play, however, took the third baseman unawares and the throw went into the stands, the runner scoring.

The spectacle of an outfielder lazily loping after a long fly to get under the ball just as it is about to come to earth is a familiar one. The fielder has not measured the territory he has to cover nor does he need to measure it in order to time his haste and arrive under the ball at the precise moment. With men on bases, however, the fans will see the fielders get to the spot where the ball will fall with time to spare. A throw has to be made and a spare interval is needed.

The Man Who Licked the Criminals Struck Only One Blow (A Fable).

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE Vice President took the oath of office and turned to face the waiting newspaper men. The country, he knew, would expect a reassuring message.

"The people of these United States," said he, "called me to serve them as Vice President. Now it has pleased Providence to call me to a higher place and to entrust me with greater responsibilities.

"There will be no change in the policies of this administration. Nothing will be done to disrupt commerce or industry."

He paused. He had said the necessary things. Business as usual. No panic. Big business would be safe.

He had more to say, however, and watchers could see the muscles of his jaw tighten and his mouth set in grim lines. Thus a man's face betrays him when he prepares a threat.

"One thing more," he snapped. "I have sworn to uphold the law and the Constitution. The law will be enforced.

"Don't misunderstand this. The criminal element has scoffed at law and laughed in scornful contempt of the law's servants. It has dared to match its strength against the might of this Government. It thinks itself beyond the reach of law.

"I accept the challenge. The law will be enforced. I do not say I shall try or shall do my best. I give fair warning that the law will be enforced."

The reporters scratched fragmentary notes. One of them added the word "bull."

That cynical Americanism expressed the reaction of the criminal world the next morning when seven-column headlines shrieked the new President's threat.

"He can't do it," said the underworld. "With a good lawyer and enough money, you can keep a case in court until the witnesses die of old age. Let him shoot that stuff to please the reformers. It won't hurt business."

Apparently they were right. For three months the Big Town drank its hooch as usual; the stick-up men plied their trade; graft, bribery, murder continued as before.

But there were hundreds of quiet strangers in town.

And one morning the city awoke to find soldiers in the street. A colonel of marines sat in the mayor's chair. Martial law had supplanted civil authority.

Thirty-two thousand men were arrested. The evidence was clear in every case. There were no lawyers. A military court working smoothly and swiftly, sentenced 32,000 men to five-year terms in a Federal prison.

"Either the Government must rule," said the new President, "or it must surrender control to the criminal element. The law will be enforced, and life and property protected, though one man in every ten must be placed behind bars."

No such round-up was necessary, however. The land became virtuous overnight. Men do not trifle with the law when punishment is swift and certain.

MEDDLESOME STANDARDIZER

Czechoslovakia, being a long, narrow state wrapped around little post-war Hungary, has its radio troubles, and so has Hungary; for people in central Europe are polylingual, as we in the United States are not, and wireless waves pay no attention to customs officials, frontier stations or the sedition laws of neighboring states, observes the New York Herald Tribune.

Hungary believes that large sections of Czechoslovakia are rightfully hers, and her broadcasting stations are constantly putting out irredentist propaganda, which is irritating to the Czechs. Last autumn Czech stations drowned out news of the good Hungarian harvest with counterblasts, thoroughly annoying to the Magyar landlords, on the glories of land reform across the frontier. And now the radio war has come up for acid debate in the Prague Parliament.

Germany and Poland have had their radio disputes, too, and doubtless, if Russian distances were not so immense and if Russian were intelligible to more people in the West, the bitterest radio protests would concern the ether propaganda of the Bolsheviks, a field which they assiduously cultivate. The old paradox reasserts itself. Nations, we say, need to know one another better, and then we discover that increased contacts may cause increased conflicts. They do, sometimes; and sometimes they do not. Where conflicts are already bitter, as in eastern Europe, every new channel of contact is likely to prove exacerbating; but in the long run better knowledge must lead to better understanding. Canadian broadcasting stations do not disturb our border cities, and Canadians gladly listen-in to Yankee stations, and in the Philippines the radio is one of the greatest links among the people, who speak various dialects, as it is in vast, diverse Russia and is coming to be in China, with its many tongues.

Ultimately, no doubt, broadcasting will tend to break down the psychological frontiers between neighbor nations, which seems to us today a benefit. Some day captious historians, looking back, may complain of it as a meddlesome standardizer.

THIRTEEN FRIDAYS.

Thirteen Fridays in every year falling on the thirteenth of the month will be one of the curious things which will happen if the plan for a 13-month calendar, advocated by George Eastman, is adopted. Dividing the year into 13 equal months of 28 days each, however, will put money in our pockets and give us more time for worth-while leisure, Mr. Eastman declares, explaining the proposed calendar reform in the June issue of Popular Science Monthly.

Every month would begin on Sunday and end on the fourth Saturday thereafter. Monday would always be either the 2d, the 9th, the 16th or the 23d of the month. The new 13-month would be placed between June and July and be given the name of "Sol."

In the new calendar there would be an extra day every year and two extra days in leap year. The annual, or extra, blank day, to be known as "year-day," would fall between Saturday and Sunday, December 28 and January 1, and would be celebrated all over the world as a holiday. In the leap year there would be another blank day, not a part of any month—"leap-day," falling between June 28 and Sol 1, making another extra long week-end for midsummer.

The dates of most holidays would be altered by such a change, but Mr. Eastman explains that it would bring them all on Mondays so that each would give us an extra long week-end. Independence Day would come on July 2 instead of July 4; Memorial Day on June 2 instead of May 30; Washington's birthday on February 23 instead of February 22, Lincoln's birthday on February 9 instead of February 12.

The adoption of such a system would result in great saving in clerical work. It would also mean that men on monthly salaries would be paid thirteen times a year instead of twelve. Mr. Eastman expects that the reform will take place in 1933, the next year in which January 1 will fall on Sunday.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Democrats Getting in Position to Capture Congress Seats — Republicans Must Watch Their Step.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Following the election the Democratic party was in a state of demoralization. Its candidates had been decisively beaten. There was an undercurrent of feeling that the party was doomed, and the swan song of Al Smith was awaited with interest. The Smith speech was a tocsin. He called the Democratic party to arms, and fired the first gun in a movement to refurbish the party that has been taken up by Democrats throughout the country. The rebuilding of the Democratic party has gone steadily forward.

At the close of the campaign the Democratic party was in debt in the amount of some $1,500,000, a larger deficit than had ever been marked up before. It was obvious that the first step in rebuilding the party would have to be reduction of the deficit. Dollar by dollar, money was obtained to be applied to this end, and it was announced in New York several days ago that the debt had been reduced to $350,000. Democrats and Republicans alike are interested in the accomplishment, for with the deficit reduced to a nominal figure it now will be possible to go ahead with rehabilitation of the party.

Primary attention will be paid to the congressional elections of next year. Democrats are organizing to capture seats in Congress. In many respects it looks as though the hour of the minority had struck. Congress is all tangled up in the tariff, farm relief and other matters of importance. There seems to be a disposition not to pull in full harmony with the President. The Republican party will have to watch its step if it is to survive next year's elections.

INDEPENDENT.

Mrs. Willebrandt Not the First Woman to Hold Position of Assistant Attorney General—Mrs. Adams Preceded Her.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A serious error has been made by the local newspapers, yours included, in the stories covering Mrs. Willebrandt's resignation. You state that she is the first woman ever to have held so high a position as that of Assistant Attorney General of the United States. The fact is she was appointed after the resignation of her predecessor, also a woman and a Californian. The honor fell to Mrs. Willebrandt because frequently when an administration changes and a new appointee is named the appointment, for political expediency, is held within the same State.

President Wilson appointed Mrs. Annette Abbott Adams, of San Francisco, to the position of Assistant Attorney General of the United States. Her appointment was confirmed by the Senate June 3, 1920. She was in charge of the division of taxation under which division were some very large income tax suits which she prosecuted. She was also in charge of insurance, minor regulations of commerce and prohibition, including the war-time prohibition act. She prosecuted large numbers of cases successfully which were most difficult, because the law was not clear and the national prohibition law did not take effect until June 16, 1920. She prosecuted bootlegging cases creditably. She resigned in August, 1921, to resume her practice in San Francisco. Mrs. Willebrandt was appointed in September, 1921.

Mrs. Adams' friends and the supporters of President Wilson will appreciate that justice be given in publishing this correction.

MARY WRIGHT JOHNSON.

Canada's Failure to Stop Bootlegging Shows That "Regulation" of Liquor Traffic Is Impossible.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The news from Canada should be an eye-opener to those of our "wets" who want us to adopt the Canadian system of dealing with liquor in the hope that it would stop bootlegging.

Now it is found that Canadian bootleggers go along the same route as the government distributors of liquor, and distribute liquor at a lower price. The "wets" ask, "Does prohibition prohibit?" We may well ask, "Does regulation regulate?"

Long ago a keen observer said, in regard to efforts to "regulate" the social evil by licensing it, "It is in the nature of vice that it refuses to be regulated." It is impossible to regulate the liquor traffic effectively, because a large number of the dealers care for nothing but their own profit and a large number of the drinkers care for nothing but their own pleasure, and these two classes together defy any restrictions that are laid upon them for the public good.

ALICE STONE BLACKWELL.

Valuable Precedent Discovered in Support of the Argument That Time Establishes Prescriptive Wrong.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The press reports that in the case before the District Supreme Court involving the submetering of electric light by apartment house owners "counsel for the owners contended that submetering of electric current has been practiced since 1915, and asserted that the central meters and submeters placed in their buildings would now be rendered useless."

Writing from memory, this argument is about on a par with the defense made in the English courts some centuries ago by a highwayman charged with robbing a pedestrian on Gad's Hill in London; his contention being that robbery on Gad's Hill was no crime, the practice being firmly established by precedent, as the memory of man ran not to the contrary when it was not customary to rob on Gad's Hill.

Let us hope that these gentlemen will be no more successful in convincing the court of the soundness of their contention than was this highwayman.

Garden Guild Meets Today At Cathedral

Annual Gathering Will Be Held in Beautiful Bishop's Garden.

By JEAN ELIOT.

On the invitation of the Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, the annual meeting of the All Hallows Guild, the garden guild of the National Cathedral, will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the bishop's garden. Members have been asked to bring friends, who are garden lovers or who are interested in the guild's plans for landscaping the beautiful Cathedral Close.

An organization to which belong men, women and children from all over the country, with many prominent Washingtonians, the guild has been for a long time engaged in beautifying the bishop's garden. It is now at its loveliest, with roses running riot and with old fashioned perennial borders in full bloom.

This is a garden for the ages, its entrance through a twelfth century Norman arch, its very heart a wayside cross, a rare object of early Gothic art from France, which was the gift of Mr. George Gray Barnard, the sculptor. Centuries old, these crosses were welcomed by pilgrims as guides and guards along the way to a church. Here, framed in old English boxwood and shadowed by flowering fruit trees, it marks the end of a pilgrimage.

An ancient Norman court, with its stone wall fountain, a fount of Charlemagne's time; the Shadow House—a medeival name for a garden house—the gift of the Bishop's Guild, which is built of stone from President Cleveland's old house; a pool with a time-worn bas relief placed above it, and a memorial sun dial are picturesque features of the landscaping of this beauty spot.

Steps from Abingdon, the birthplace of Nellie Custis, have been worked into the design and some of the box is from the ruined garden of Hayfield Manor, the house built by George Washington in 1761. Nature has contributed towering trees, supplemented by cedars of Lebanon, historic yew trees and other rare horticultural specimens. And the whole has taken on a patina of age and beauty, with the perennial youth of constantly blooming flowers, under the devoted care of those—women, most of them—who have dreamed a dream of this garden of the ages and have seen it materialize.

Mrs. John H. Gibbons is president of the All Hallows Guild and Mrs. G. C. F. Bratenahl, wife of Dean Bratenahl, is chairman of the garden committee. Other members of the committee are Mrs. Charles J. Bell, Mrs. John C. Boyd, Mrs. Robert Brookings, Mrs. James E. Freeman, Mrs. John H. Gibbons, Deaconess Goodwin, Mrs. Daniel W. Knowlton, Mrs. McCook Knox, Miss Mary S. Lawrence, Mrs. Harold N. ALL SUMMER RECESS SEEN FOR CONGRESS

Prospective Debenture Plan Agreement Brings Hope to Leaders.

PARLEY TO BE HELD TODAY

(Associated Press.)

A prospective conciliation within the farm relief conference committee over the export debenture plan has caused administration leaders to look forward confidently to an all-summer recess, beginning early in June.

A meeting of the conference has been called for today by Senator McNary, of Oregon, its chairman. While no definite agreement has been announced, resumption of the meetings has been taken to mean that the conferees have reached an understanding for the Senate members to agree to eliminate the disputed provision opposed by President Hoover as a part of farm legislation.

The leaders admitted, however, that the outcome of the debenture controversy between the House and Senate would still be in doubt, even should the Senate conferees decide to take a report back to the Senate suggesting the elimination of the plan.

Senate leaders are convinced that if the Senate itself insists upon the provision it would be impossible for Congress to recess.

Leaders Want Action.

President Hoover and Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, have made known that they would not favor a recess until farm relief is disposed of and a date set for a final vote on the tariff bill before the convening of the regular session next December. The plan, contingent upon the enactment of farm legislation, is for the Senate finance committee to work on the tariff bill during the recess and for Congress to return early in the fall to complete the special session program of the administration.

The House is slated to act upon the census and reapportionment bill before the recess, but this is expected to be accomplished without difficulty. In the Senate a showdown probably will be seen on the recommendation of President Hoover for the repeal of the national origins provisions of the immigration act which goes into effect July 1. Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, is leading those favoring retention of the provision and believes he has the votes to defeat the resolution of Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, for its repeal.

Quorums Are Doubtful.

Both Senate and House will meet today, but leaders are doubtful that quorums will be obtained. Failing in this, a recess until Monday will be taken.

The Senate has before it the bill of Senator Borah, of Idaho, to place commission merchants dealing in perishable products under Government control.

Consent of the House members of the farm relief conference committee to resume meetings was taken to indicate that work will be continued until an agreement has been reached on all of the disputed sections of the two farm bills passed separately by the House and Senate. The plan for the conference meeting is to have the conferees consider all minor differences first and leave the debenture section to the last.

A report from the conference committee recommending elimination of the debenture section would not necessitate a vote in the House, which assurance is what House conferees have been insisting upon. The Senate conferees had desired a report of disagreement, which would have required a vote in the House. It was over this difference that the House members abruptly broke off negotiations, and a partial victory for their contention is seen in the resumption of the sessions.

Some concern is being manifested by Republican leaders, however, over a check of the Senate membership, which was held to show as much support for the debenture plan as when it was inserted into the farm bill. Senators McNary and Watson are watching the situation closely and are hopeful that by the time the conference committee is ready to report a number of senators will be willing to forego their own wishes and accept a report recommending elimination of debentures in order to obtain a farm law early enough to benefit this year's crops.

CHURCHES' COUNCIL DOCTRINE ASSAILED

Contributions Accepted From "Improper" Sources, Is Presbytery Charge.

HOPE OF MERGER VOICED

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 30 (A.P.).—Charges that the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America had exceeded its chartered authority in matters of doctrine and had accepted contributions from "improper" sources were made here today at the seventy-first annual general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church.

The charges, which were made in the form of a memorial from the Argyle Presbytery, were referred to the committee on bills and overtures for study and recommendation.

The Argyle Presbytery supplemented its allegations with the suggestion that the United Presbyterian Church sever relations with the Federal Council of Churches.

The alleged "improper" contributions, the memorial said, were made anonymously and added the sources of income of the council are very much in question.

Ten memorials from widely scattered presbyteries expressed hope that steps toward uniting with the Presbyterian Church in the United States, better known as the Southern Presbyterian Church and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America—the larger Presbyterian denomination—would be successful.

Wheeling Presbytery asked that ministers be retired at the age of 65, but that, if able, they be retained in service to assist newly formed congregations that are unable to support pastors.

A paper from the Wisconsin Presbytery asked that the assemby request that the Government, acting under the eighteenth amendment, take steps toward an educational campaign, which would outline the benefits of prohibition and the dangers that follow violation of the liquor laws.

Invitations for next year's meeting were received today from Winona Lake, Ind., and Des Moines, Iowa. Action was deferred, as it was expected additional invitations would be tendered.

Birmingham, Ala., May 30 (A.P.).—The personnel of a committee to represent the Southern Presbyterian Church at conferences at which union of all Presbyterian bodies in the United States will be considered was announced today by Dr. William Ray Dobyns, of Birmingham, moderator of the general assembly. Dr. Dobyns is chairman of the committee.

Members of the committee include Dr. Henry H. Sweets, Louisville, Ky.; Dr. Harris E. Kirk, Baltimore; Robert P. Campbell, Asheville, N. C.; Charles H. H. Branch, Tampa, Fla.; Dr. Thomas H. Clyce, Sherman, Tex.; Eugene D. W. Abbott, Fulton, Mo., and Dr. James I. Vance, Nashville, Tenn.

Six Corpses Found In Sunken Caisson

Ten Workmen Were Saved When Broken Air Lock Caused Tragedy.

Jersey City, N. J., May 30 (A.P.).—The bodies of six men today were recovered from the caisson tomb in which they were suffocated and crushed in the mud beneath the Hackensack River bed last night.

Ten men were saved, but their six fellow workmen, laboring 75 feet below the river bed, had no chance to reach the surface when a compressed air lock burst, permitting muck to enter the huge compartment and sinking it deep into the stream. What caused the lock to blow out has not been determined.

Throughout the night and part of today rescue workers dug into the muck in the caisson before the bodies were reached. Some of those rescued last night had suffered broken arms and legs in the tremendous mud pressure at the bottom of the river.

Norway Coast Shaken By Severe Earthquake

Oslo, Norway, May 30 (A.P.).—The seismological station at Bergen registered an earthquake shock at 12:32 a. m. today which was felt along the southwestern coast of Norway.

The shock was strong enough to waken sleeping persons but did no damage on shore. The telegraph cable between Arendal and England, however, broke 80 miles from land, supposedly because of the shock.

Sandwiches Cause 200 to Become Ill

Ptomaine Poisoning Cuts Short Meeting of Oklahoma Firemen.

Muskogee, Okla., May 30 (A.P.).—Meat sandwiches served at a box supper here last night for delegates to a State Firemen's Association convention were blamed for the illness of 200 persons who were recovering tonight from effects of ptomaine poisoning.

The victims, most of them firemen and members of their families, were stricken shortly after the supper. Many became ill at a dance which followed. Others, most of whom returned here for treatment, were attacked after leaving Muskogee to motor to their home cities.

All who were taken to hospitals had been released tonight. The condition of Mrs. George Higginbotham, wife of the Muskogee fire chief, dangerously ill for several hours, was reported improved.

The Muskogee Fire Department force was so weakened by the ptomine attacks that volunteers were recruited to fill the places of the ill firemen.

Closing sessions of the convention today were cut short as a result of the greatly diminished attendance.

Canadian Patrol Seizes American Fishing Boat

Prince Rupert, B. C., May 30 (A.P.).—The United States salmon troller Mary C. Fisher was brought into port by a Canadian patrol boat today after seizure off Tow Hill, Graham Island, for alleged violation of Canadian fishing regulations. Capt. A. A. Fillion, of the salmon troller, claims he went to Tow Hill to make repairs as allowed under international agreement.

The seizure of the Mary C. Fisher follows a number of other seizures of United States salmon trollers recently. It was charged the boats were using Canadian waters for fishing under the guise of entering for shelter or effecting repairs.

ROTARIANS REFUSE TO ABOLISH SLOGAN

Traveling Members Voted the Right to Attend Meeting of Any Club.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED

Dallas, Tex., May 30 (A.P.).—Rotarians gathered here at their annual international convention today elected officers who will be announced tomorrow, voted to retain their slogan and decided to hold more conventions in foreign lands.

A resolution declaring that the 1931 meeting and at least every fourth convention thereafter should be held outside of North America, was passed.

The delegates refused to abandon the slogan "He profits most who serves best," in spite of arguments from foreign delegates who said that the slogan, translated into foreign tongues, had a much more commercial connotation than it has in English. The convention also refused the request of English delegates that dues be reduced from $4.50 per annum to $4.

Another resolution approved gives traveling Rotarians the privilege of attending Rotary meetings wherever they may be.

One resolution, very important to Italian clubs, providing that a statement be prepared on the relation of a Rotarian to his country, was passed unanimously. Italian Rotarians, under the Facist regime, wanted it made clear that their duty to Rotary in no way interfered with their duty to their country.

A resolution scheduled for action tomorrow would provide that a Rotarian, after ten years of membership would continue to belong to the club on retiring from business. The present rule automatically eliminates a member when he retires from his business.

Tonight the convention attended a carnival, the delegates from foreign lands coming in their native costume.

The registration committee announced today that registrations had passed the 9,500 mark, making this the second largest convention the organization has ever held.

80-Year-Old Moonshiner Bonded to Quit Distilling

Special to the Washington Post.

Luray, Va., May 30.—A $2,500 bond to abstain from making liquor in the future, a fine of $500 and 30 days in jail today were imposed upon John D. Ruffner, 80-year-old moonshiner, in the Page County Court, Luray, Judge H. W. Bertram presiding.

For several months the court has carried over Ruffner's case. As each session convened the veteran moonshiner was fortified with physicians' affidavits that he was physically unable to stand trial.

Ruffner, one of the county's leading farmers, will have to stand another trial for resisting prohibition officers when they discovered his moonshine operations several months ago at his home seven miles north of Luray.

2 GANGSTERS SLAIN; GAMBLER KIDNAPED

One of Murders Is Close to Chicago Police Station in Three Flare-Ups.

$20,000 RANSOM SOUGHT

Chicago, May 30 (A.P.).—Two gangsters were killed and a gambler was believed held for $20,000 ransom in three flare-ups of Chicago gangland today. One of the gangsters, recently acquitted of a murder, was found in a deserted saloon within shouting distance of the Central Police Station, downtown.

The other, identified by an undertaker's receipt as Dominick Costa, was found on a prairie in Hinsdale, Chicago suburb, spots of fresh blood indicating he had not lain there long. He had been shot seven times in the back, the powder burns nearly destroying his shirt.

The reported kidnap victim was "Kid" Austin, who was seen being hustled into an automobile by three men on the Northwest Side. An anonymous telephone call to the police said he was being held for $20,000 ransom.

Thomas McElligott, whose body was found in the saloon known as Staley's Grill, at Madison and Market streets, was implicated in an $8,000 robbery last winter and was also named as the purchaser of a machine gun by Russell Thompson, gun salesman, who was quizzed in the Moran gang massacre.

Michael Reilly and William Clifford, fellow racketeers and gunmen of McElligott, who were implicated in robberies with him and who were acquitted with him for the murder of a garage attendant last year, were found slain in Cicero several weeks ago.

No one who witnessed the McElligott killing was found. A man in the rear of the saloon called to a police sergeant that "some one had met with an accident," and the sergeant on investigation found the body, face down, in the basement. The gangster had been shot once through the heart.

Costa, found in Hinsdale, had no formal police record, but was known as an associate of hoodlums. The police believe that he had become well acquainted with the activities of gangsters, who considered him a potential "stool pigeon," and disposed of him.

Heat Causes Explosion In Cartridge Factory

Bridgeport, Conn., May 30 (A.P.).—Powder stored in an underground vault at the Remington-Union Metallic Cartridge Co.'s plant exploded this afternoon, shaking up that immediate section of the city. The intense heat was believed to have been the cause of the explosion.

Fire apparatus and police reserves were rushed to the plant, but there was little need for their services, as the powder in that particular storage place had been burned up. The plant was closed for Memorial Day, and no one was known to have been near the powder station.

Man Kills Wife, Burns Home, Shoots 2 Others

Charlotte, N. C., May 30 (A.P.).—Setting fire to the home of his estranged wife, Farman Hill, negro, today capped four days of troublesome efforts at reconciliation by shooting and killing his wife, Estelle, and wounding two other negroes as they fled the burning building. Hill escaped. Hill, police said, came here from Georgia last week in search of his wife. Monday night he found her and when she refused to have anything to do with him cut her on the head.

Early today he returned to his wife's home and set it afire. Then he shot each of the occupants as they came out. His wife was killed, but his sister-in-law, Lilia Howard, and Gilrath Brown were only slightly hurt.

It was learned today that one person had been killed and several injured while the new Afghan ruler was inspecting his troops.

Messages from Kabul stated that the bomb had been buried in the ground and exploded while Habibullah was passing nearby. It was added, but not confirmed, that the man killed was Syed Hussain, the emir's minister of war.

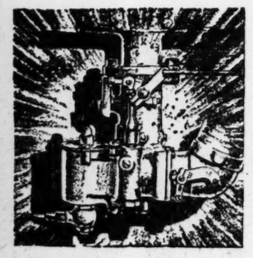
lightning speed is that quality in the new improved "Standard" Gasoline which whisks your car over the roads on the wings of the wind . . . cuts out ahead of traffic and nimbly leaves more sluggish cars behind . . . lightning speed is every-minute performance with improved "Standard" because it is a richer, gassier gasoline.

THERE are many times when friction is the direct cause of decreased speed. But "Standard" lubricants, at every point of friction, eliminate friction and allow the pistons and bearings to move freely. "Standard" service stations and "Standard" dealers are well equipped to render complete "Standard" lubrication jobs—quickly and efficiently. Form the regular habit of asking the "Standard" lubrication doctors to keep your car "friction-free"—and sweet-running.



TECHNICALLY SPEAKING, speed is ordinarily derived by: opening the throttle valve on the carburetor, allowing a rich mixture of gasoline to enter the firing chamber, and correctly timing the spark so that the gas vapor will fire just as the piston is ready for the power stroke. Because improved "Standard" Gasoline is a richer, more perfectly balanced gasoline, it gives that extra power to drive the pistons at greater speed ". . . it's the champion."

IMPROVED "Standard" Gasoline is a motor fuel built for speed. So volatile that it snaps instantly into roaring power at a touch on the accelerator. Yet not too volatile. It's a well-balanced gasoline—an all 'round motor performer that never dissipates itself in flash starting and acceleration alone. It possesses a perfectly synchronized range of "boiling points" that gives it unequalled stores of power to spare—for any load or any journey. The improved "Standard" Gasoline is pure. Crystal-clear. Clean-burning. No crank case dilution. Smoother. Richer. All that the name implies ". . . it's the champion."

Big Antenna Towers Will Be Lighted

New Connecticut Station to Be Visible by Night as Well as by Day; Neon Lamps to Be Used; Will Be Model for Future.

Not waiting to be told to do so, and despite that fact, it is not legally required, the two antenna towers, each 200 feet high, built upon an elevation of 700 feet on Avon Mountain, west of Hartford, Conn., and conected with the new 50,000-watt station of WTIC, now building, have already been painted for highest visibility during daylight. This has been done according to specifications furnished by the division of airways, of the Department of Commerce. In addition to this the towers will be lighted at night, perhaps before the station, which is to be the most powerful in New England, begins operations or as soon as suitable appliances for the purpose can be obtained.

"The lighting will probably consist of a pair of high-powered Neon lamps at the top of each tower, with an automatic switch between, so that in case one lamp fails the other will light up automatically," according to W. G. Cowles, vice president of the Travelers Broadcasting Service. "The frame of the towers will probably be illuminated by flood lights on the ground, which we believe is very superior to the effort to put lights occasionally on the legs of the towers."

The set which is being manufactured for the plant of the Radio Corporation of America will be the first of its kind ever produced and will be used as a model in future construction. A similar set, it is understood, will be manufactured for a station in Rome, which will be operated by the Italian government.

One of the features of the new plant will be the use of directional antennae, designed to protect receivers to the east plant and to send as much power as possible to the westward. The results of the experimentation will be watched with interest because a number of stations have attempted directional antennae without much success. Another unusual result that will be obtained from this new plant will be 100 per cent modulation.

Through use of multiple broadcasting antennae, properly placed and energized, not only conductively but inductively, it is hoped that, in spite of tremendous power, only enough will be radiated toward Hartford and other immediate points east to permit pleasurable reception.

Homer Denney plays the calliope on the Island Queen, Ohio River boat, from which Station WLW at Cincinnati, frequently picked up by Washington listeners on these early summer nights. Denney has played that calliope for more than a score of years, including the past two seasons when the ear-splitting steam whistles have been put on the air.

Anything to be known about calliopes, Denney should know, for he has worked for more than 25 years for the only company in America that manufactures and holds patents on the calliope. He has tuned every circus calliope that ever went to Cincinnati and he has trained many of the players of the instruments now traveling with circuses.

"A real calliope is a collection of whistles played by steam," Denney says. "Instruments using compressed air to blow their whistles are usually called calliophones and can be used indoors.

"The Island Queen's calliope is fired from the ship's boiler. I decrease the head of steam from 240 pounds of steam to 100 pounds, or about 10 pounds to each finger. I have to stand to play it in order to use enough force to press the keys down. Circus calliope players usually can sit at their instruments because the portable boilers carry so little steam."

The Island Queen's calliope, like all others of its kind, never is in perfect tone because the steam pressure never can be evenly distributed to the whistles, Denney says. Then too, the instrument is never covered but stands open to the elements on the Island Queen's top deck and changes of temperature affect the brass valves in the copper whistles. He says the whistles can not be kept in any sort of tune in cold weather.

"Many people think the calliope got its name from the Greek muse, but the truth of the matter is that its inventor was a Frenchman named Calliope and he gave his name to it," Denney reveals.

In his years of playing the noisy instrument Denney has become slightly deafened because of its blasts.

"But, I'd rather play than eat," he says. "At one time I played for two hours and 40 minutes without taking my fingers off the keys. I was competing with another player at the docks at Louisville, Ky. I won, but I couldn't move a finger for a week."

The princesse line returns to us in cycles. It has appeared in various guises from time to time since the ladies of an ancient Egyptian dynasty decided to go beltless. During the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries was introduced the princesse line that is most favored today—interpreted, of course, in the modern manner—and the princesse mode had its heyday under the first French empire. It cropped up in the 1870s, again in 1893, and now the belted dress is less taken for granted than it was a few years ago. Tucks, inserted pieces and gathers prevent the waist line from being entirely obliterated and emphasize in a charming manner the natural proportions of the figure. Although godets and pleated sections are also used to break up the absolutely straight princesse line, a double tier is a favorite device this season.

The frock at the left in the sketch of printed and plain silk crepe, uses inverted tucks down the center of the bodice for chic detail. The frock at the right, of crepe marocain, has gathers on each side of the shaped band that extends up the front from the second flounce.

Ways of the Olden Mayas.

V. MUSIC AND BOOKS

ONCE I went into a Chinese laundry, and found that a phonograph was being played. I wasn't certain just what the noise was—until I was told that it was produced by the singing of Chinese women.

To my ears, the "music" sounded like screaming and screeching; but to the ears of the Chinese it was sweet melody.

Mayan musicians playing tunes. Note that the "music" is put in the picture.

I am reminded of that incident when I write about the music of the olden Mayas. I am sure that it was not very much like modern music, and I fancy that if we could go back to that time we should not call it music at all.

Yet it was music to the Mayas, and we may be sure that they enjoyed it. The playing impressed them so much that they made pictures of the players.

One of those pictures shows two men, one beating a kind of drum, the other playing a "flageolet." One of the men is pictured as being black. Certainly his skin was not black in its natural color, for there were no negroes in America in those times.

The most interesting thing about the picture is the fact that the music was given form. Scrolls are used to show the sounds coming from the drum and the flageolet!

The Mayas also had books, although very few of them have come down to us. Some of their writing was done on the hides of deer, some on bark. But a kind of paper made from the amati plant was the best writing material.

The Indian authors wrote about history, magic, medicine and religion.

Three ancient Maya books have been saved. They were written on long strips of amati paper, and were folded in the way of a Japanese screen. They contain calendar records, along with words about religion and magic. The figures are shown with dots and dashes, while the words are shown with pictures. You remember that the Mayas did not have an alphebet.

Atlantic City Talks Today Over Radio

Curtis, Two Ambassadors and Other Dignitaries to Take Part in Convention Hall Dedication—Birthday Broadcast Music.

Talks by Charles Curtis, Vice President of the United States, Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador to this country, Senor Alejandro Padilla, the Ambassador from Spain, and other dignitaries, together with a musical program by Creatore and his band, will mark the opening of the Atlantic City Auditorium and Convention Hall at 9 o'clock, to be broadcast by two national chains and heard locally from WMAL and WRC.

The huge structure situated on the famous boardwalk of the seashore resort is said to be the world's largest auditorium. It has a seating capacity of 41,000, in addition to an ornate ballroom which will hold 5,000 people.

National representation for the District of Columbia will be discussed in the "Half Hour With the Senate" to be broadcast at 9:30 o'clock from WRC. The two speakers on this occasion will be Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and Senator Wesley L. Jones, of Washington.

Both are closely identified with affairs in the District, Senator Capper being chairman of the Senate committee. He is in daily contact with the operation of the Government in the City of Washington and the development of the National Capital. Senator Jones is also a member of the District of Columbia committee.

At the present time the city is run by a commission form of government and there are no local elections. It is this situation that the two senators will discuss. Both will deliver their talks from the studios of Station WRC.

A new presiding officer for these programs will also be heard when Senator Jesse H. Metcalf, of Rhode Island, officiates in place of Russell M. Arundel, executive secretary of the Senate broadcasting committee.

A special program by the Cities Service Cavaliers and Concert Orchestra will open the third year of consecutive weekly broadcasting at 7 o'clock from WRC. The second birthday broadcast will celebrate the successful achievement of two years on the air without change in personnel or the nature of their programs. The anniversary program will repeat some of the outstanding favorites they broadcast before.

Leo O'Rourke, tenor soloist of the Cavaliers Quartet, will sing his version of "My Buddy" and the quartet will harmonize on perennial favorites such as "Down By the Old Mill Stream" and "Just a Song at Twilight."

The Symphony Orchestra, led by Rosario Bourdon, will play special arrangements of Saint-Saens' "The Swan," "Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Flight of the Bumble-Bee," and selections from Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite." The hour will open and close with Bourdon's "Cities Service March."

The Wallace Memorial Sunshine Carolers will be heard from WRC in an hour's program, beginning at noon.

The Washington Chamber of Commerce will present Congressman Clyde Kelly, of Pennsylvania, and W. Irving Glover, Assistant Postmaster General, in charge of the Air Mail Service, in a half-hour program at 7:30 o'clock from WMAL. "Importance of Air Mail Service to Washington and to the Nation" is the subject for discussion.

Elmer Rogers will talk about "American Public Schools" from WJSV at 8 o'clock this evening. The rest of the evening will be devoted to musical entertainment, with the Roosevelt Trio, the Gondoliers, the West River Trio, and a group of old-time fiddlers scheduled.

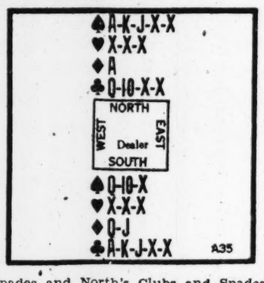
Following a program of dinner music, WOL will broadcast a program by Katherine Dunning, pianist, the Red Wings and "Amos 'n' Andy."

The Musical Clock will be the first feature from the station in the morning, followed by the Morning Hour of Music and a household chat by Peggy Clarke.

WORK ON BRIDGE

The Auction Player unfamiliar with Contract is apt to be troubled by the big difference between Auction and Contract values for tricks, under-tricks, premiums, slams and rubbers, etc. The vulnerability feature of Contract is also apt to be confusing.

As a special service to our readers, Mr. Work will be glad to send you upon request, complimentary, a complete statement explaining all these new features, provided you inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for his reply. Mr. Work also answers all Auction and Contract questions without charge.



ONE of the most trying of the bidding situations that presents itself to the Contract player occurs when one partner opens the bidding with a minor suit and the other, with normal or more than normal support for that suit, has also a major suit which doubtless will be better if there is support for it across the table, but which surely will not be as good if the original minor bidder lacks normal support for it.

It will be noted that South (Dealer) would start by bidding one Club and that, with West passing, North with a very strong hand to support his partner's minor, would be troubled to decide whether to raise the Clubs or bid Spades. Upon the basis of the count recommended for use when supporting partner's suit-bid, North's hand aggregates the very large total of 27 for jumping Clubs; 13 in Spades, 9 in diamonds and 5 in Clubs. This would be much more than sufficient to justify jumping South's one Club to four—practically enough to jump five; if the South bid had been made in Spades and North's Clubs and Spades were transposed, four Spades would have been North's correct declaration.

North's problem is whether it will be easier for the combined hands to make five Clubs or four Spades. Unless he shows his Spades, the combined wisdom of the partnership can not be brought to bear upon the solution; consequently North should bid two Spades, not one, because one would not show North's great Spade strength. After North's two Spades, supposing that East pass, South should bid three Spades to show his Spade support; then North should bid four Clubs to give South a choice between four Spades and five Clubs; and South, with his Spade holding and the grave probability of losing three tricks in the other two suits, would bid four Spades. It will be noted that if the initial lead should be a Heart, three tricks would be taken before Declarer could obtain the lead; and while game would be made at Spades, it would not be at Clubs.

Dare INTERPRETS the MODE

White beads embroidered in white georgette in gracefully intricate patterns give distinction to this Lovely Lady evening gown. Modern and gracious! (Courtesy of the Maison Irfe, Paris.)

SKIRTS, now that we have decided they are really getting longer, are taking up more and more of the attention of the haute courture, and many are the problems the new skirts have brought.

The evening skirts, which touch the floor at the back but are rather short in front, make necessary a lovely skirt lining, which will be glimpsed as the wearer moves about.

• • • •

Skirt fullness means that the couturiers must go to great lengths to avoid making hips looking unnecessarily large, and for this reason skirt yokes are becoming more and more important. These are not always regular in shape, but are frequently longer on one side than the other, and sometimes form points or scallops on both bodice and skirt. One particular happy use of this is the yoke, which is pointed in front and back and drops at the sides, with a distinct slenderizing effect.

The silhouette of the new skirts makes volants almost a necessity, some of them gathered and some flared. These mount only half-way on the skirt, keeping the fullness very low, which, with the higher waist-line, gives a refreshingly new silhouette.

Two superimposed volants are used on some evening dresses of satin, forming a train in the back and still leaving the front short.

Last week we gave you a lot of designs for different types of lampshades-with-a-personality. And this week we give you the detailed directions for making the very shades themselves.

Parchment shades, glace shades, all kinds of shades there are—each and every one requires a different procedure for making, of course. And you have but to send your stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the leaflet which gives full directions for going about it.

Coin de Couleur.

Looking at a large piece of gray felt or blotting paper prepares the eye for an accurate receiving of color. This is also the best material on which to place anything you are trying to match, or colors when you are trying to make an odd color harmony—something entirely possible to those who are sensitively trained to colors.

The nerves of the eye are influenced by even the simplest colors around, a factor little realized by those unfamiliar with colors. Yet the simplest precautions and knowledge of what to do will train the slowest eye except in the case when the recording nerves from the retina of the eye to the brain are absolutely paralyzed or missing, as is the case in so-called color-blindness.

What Today Means to You

May 31.

By MARY BLAKE.

"GEMINI."

IF May 31 is your birthday, the best hours for you are from 5:30 a. m. to 7 a. m., from 2:50 p. m. to 3:35 p. m., and from 9 p. m. to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m. and from 6 p. m. to 8 p. m.

It is augured that old troubles, difficulties and worries will be revived and a spirit of depression and despondency will prevail until early evening, when you will be able to throw off the anxieties of the day and will possess a more cheerful outlook upon life. The prognosis of today's perplexities is good, and you need not anticipate further alarms, along these lines, in the future.

Children born on May 31 will be venturesome to the verge of foolhardiness and will be very energetic. Their activities should be directed along proper channels, otherwise, much of their energies will be misapplied. They will have very strong likes and dislikes, and they will freely express their feelings, without using diplomacy.

Your personality is a striking one—and a pleasant one. Downright methods will rarely be needed by you in your pursuits of success. Your smile will win more for you than is won by those possessing ability and forcefulness. The temptation that lurks in this condition to neglect work and to shirk responsibilities is avoided by you, and you honestly and very successfully try to give your personality a solid background of intelligence and conscientiousness.

You have exceptionally good taste and really only care for the best of everything. Ostentation is anathema to you. Comfort is your one desideratum; you can only find this in congenial surroundings. No matter what your origin may have been, you are an inherent aristocrat and, while feeling that you are different from others, you never "put on the dog," and are democratic in all your actions.

Your sense of justice is very strongly developed. Your nature is a kind one, and you are, perhaps, a trifle too unselfish for your own good. You never harbor a grudge and your disposition is a forgiving one. In the home, you will not only be happy yourself, but will also make happy all those who comprise the family circle, and your life promises to be successful from every point of view.

TILDEN WINS OVER COEN EASILY

Allows Protege First 2 Sets, Then Runs Out in Last Three.

PARIS, May 30 (A.P.).—America's Big Three in the French tennis championships, consisting of Bill Tilden and Frank Hunter, in the men's singles, and Helen Wills, defending the women's crown, all were bracketed in the quarter-finals today.

With the main tests still to come, Tilden staged one of his old-fashioned spurts to dispose of his youthful protege, Wilbur (Junior) Coen in five sets, 3—6, 5—7, 6—1, 6—1, 6—0. Hunter had comparatively little difficulty overcoming the Austrian star, Franz Matejka, 6—0, 2—6, 6—1, 6—4. Miss Wills, who reached the quarter-finals yesterday, had a day of idleness in preparation for her quarter-final match with Mme. Helen Lafaurie, of France, tomorrow.

In the men's competition tomorrow Tilden is paired with Baron Hubert de Morpurgo, ace of the Italian Davis Cup Team. Hunter meets Jean Borotra, of France.

Three Other French Stars In Quarter Final Round.

The remaining quarter-finalists include the other French "Musketeers"—Rene Lacoste, Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon—in addition to Baron von Kehrling, of Hungary. None experienced difficulties in their advance, Cochet disposing of the German, Hans Moldenhauer, while Borotra and Lacoste eliminated rival countrymen, Christian Boussus and Paul Feret, respectively.

The survivors in the women's singles, besides Miss Wills and Mme. Lafaurie, are Eileen Bennett and Mrs. Michael Watson, of England; Bobby Heine and Ethel Neave, of South Africa; Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, and Fraulien Cecelie Aussem, of Germany.

Tilden loafed through his match with Coen, displaying only enough ability to win. He seemed to let Coen win the first two sets and then applied enough pressure to run out three colorless sets.

General opinion was that Tilden could have won in straight sets, but the presence in the stands of Baron de Morpurgo, Italian star whom the ranking American meets tomorrow in the quarter-finals, was held responsible for Big Bill withholding his fire.

Bobby Jones Gleeful At Recovery of Clubs

Atlanta, Ga., May 30 (A.P.).—Bobby Jones, national amateur champion, swung off a train here this morning with a broad smile and delight that knew no bounds, as a telegram delivered to him en route for New York had informed him that his famous putter "Calamity Jane" and his other pet golf clubs had been recovered.

"The news was like Manna from Heaven," said Jones, "because I would have been placed at a terrible disadvantage in future competition without them."

Bobby was so ruffled over the disappearance of his clubs that he had not made arrangements to buy a new set when the news of recovery of his favorite putter, "Calamity Jane," and other choice weapons reached him.

The champion expressed the wish that arrangements would be made to return them to him speedily, so that he could get in some practice rounds before he returns East for the national open at Winged Foot.

Bobby said he had found the Winged Foot course a tough one on his trip East but declined to comment further.

Cards' Double Triumph Regains Second Place

St. Louis, May 30 (A.P.).—The St. Louis Cardinals took both games of a double-header from the Cincinnati Reds today, 5 to 1 and 8 to 2, and thus regained second place, while the Chicago Cubs dropped to third.

U.S. Davis Cup Stars Beat Cubans

Hennessey, Van Ryn in Easy Victories in Singles Play.

Both Matches Decided in Straight Sets at Detroit.

By PAUL R. MICKELSON
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

DETROIT, May 30 (A.P.).—Uncle Sam's pair of tennis Johnnies, Johnny Hennessey, of Indianapolis, and Johnny Van Ryn, of East Orange, N. J., went marching on in double-time today, all but clinching victory for the United States in the American zone Davis Cup finals against Cuba.

Without even extending themselves under the hot sun that showered the Detroit Tennis Club courts they routed Cuba's best, Capt. Ricardo Morales and Gustavo Vollmer, in straight sets in the opening two singles matches. The one-sided triumph forces the United States team to win but one of the remaining three matches—one doubles and two singles—to represent the Americas when play turns to European courts for the semifinals of world play. Van Ryn scored the easiest victory today, vanquishing Vollmer, 6—0, 6—1, 6—1, but Hennessey, who decided to experiment his chop and forehand strokes when he saw an easy victory, was more extended, winning 6—0, 6—3, 6—4.

Van Ryn and Allison Named As U. S. Doubles Team.

Handicapped by the faster American balls and a livelier court than they were accustomed, the Cubans were no match for the United States stars. Only 10 of the 45 games in both matches were forced to deuce and of these extra-time games, Van Ryn and Hennessey won seven, bearing down with a back court game that bewildered the Cubans and caught them off their guard.

Six double faults, five of which came when he had a chance to force a game to deuce, were largely responsible for Morales' defeat. His net play was alternately bad and brilliant. Finding himself outclassed, he attempted to score aces, only to fail each time. Hennessey played a safe game, lobbing the pellet into Morales' territory and then letting the Cuban lose points by too eager returns. In the three sets not one ace was scored by either player, indicating Hennessey's defensive tactics.

In placements, Hennessey scored 24, and only once did the Hoosier double fault.

Van Ryn was more relentless than Hennessey, going out to win as quick as possible with an aggressive game. Vollmer was unable to force a single game in the first set to deuce and the most he could tally in one game was two points. In the second, Van Ryn took the first four games before he dropped one at 2—4. The next two he won without much effort. Vollmer, game to the last shot, fought back with all he had in the final set, pushing Van Ryn to go to deuce eight times before the New Jersey youth won. He took the next game, 7—5, and then wilted.

Fitz-Eugene Dixon, nonplaying captain of the United States team, has selected Van Ryn and Willmer Allison to play in the doubles match tomorrow afternoon. They will be opposed by Morales and Upmann.

Hall's 70 Leads Pros In Southern Tournament

Woodward Country Club, Birmingham, Ala., May 30 (A.P.).—Charlie Hall, Birmingham professional, shot a neat 70 to lead the field in the field in the Southern Professional Golfers Association tournament here today. He was the only entrant to break par, which is 71.

Fred Haskins, of Columbus, Ga., also a professional, shot a 72 to take second place. Pete Grandison, Birmingham, and Bill Somerville, Selma, both pros, each had a 73 at the end of the 36 holes. A majority of the 60 entrants were several strokes above par.

MACKS' LEAD IS NOW 4½ GAMES

Beat Red Sox, 9-2, 9-3; Grove and Quinn in Good Form.

BOSTON, May 30 (A.P.).—The Athletics hits fiercely to win both games of a double-header, 9-2 and 9-3, from the Red Sox here today. They have won won fourteen out of their last fifteen games and took the series from the Red Sox, three games to one.

Hale hit a double and three singles in the first game and Simmons a home run and two singles in the second. Bayne relieved Russell in the box for the Red Sox in the eighth inning of the first contest and Ruffing went the distance for the Sox in the second. Lefty Grove was in the box for the Athletics the first game and Quinn pitched the second.

Foxx, Philadelphia first baseman and leader of the American League batting, ran his string of consecutive games in which he has hit safely to fourteen by hits in each contest.

The Athletics are now leading the Browns, who are in second place, by four and a half games.

Their double defeat by Washington dropped the Yanks to a point seven and a half games behind the Athletics.

TRACK STARS OPEN MEET TODAY

Stanford Favored to Retain Intercollegiate Honors.

PHILADELPHIA, May 30 (U.P.).—The team that outscores Stanford University will win the 1929 I. C. A. A. A. A. track and field championships which start at Franklin Field tomorrow. That is the opinion of nearly every one here for the great two-day collegiate classic. Few believe any team will be able to take the title from the well-balanced Stanford Team, which won in 1927 and 1928.

The feeling prevails that Stanford's chances depend largely upon the work of its two great field stars, Eric Krenz and Harlow Rothert, especially in the shot put and the discus throw. Krenz a year ago won firsts in both events, and Rothert seems nearly as formidable this year. Then, too, the Cardinals have available Ross Nichols, winner of the 120-yard high hurdles in 1928 and regarded as a certain point scorer this year, as well as a number of other potential scorers.

Three Other Champions Due To Defend Their Titles.

Three other champions of 1928 are back to defend their titles. They are Bill Edwards, negro star of New York U., who won the half-mile; James Reid, Harvard, who won the 2-mile, and Sidney Kiexelhorest, of Harvard, 220-yard low hurdler. One 1927 winner, Charles Borah, of Southern California, will compete in the 220-yard dash.

There are 667 athletes, representing 32 institutions, entered in the meet, but it is unlikely that more than two-thirds that number will compete.

English Derby Candidate Shows Speed in Trial

New Market, England, May 30 (A.P.).—Lord Derby's Hunter's Moon, second favorite in the Epsom Derby to be run June 5, was taken at half speed over a gallop of seven furlongs on a private track today and showed up well. Frank Butters, the trainer, said the colt was progressing as satisfactorily as could be expected.

The final acceptances for the derby closed Tuesday and the list published today shows 32 horses left, including all of the leading favorites. Lord Astor's Cragabour is being quoted at 6 to 1, while the odds against Hunter's Moon are 7 to 1.

3-RUN RALLY IN 9TH WINS FINAL; PENNOCK POUNDED IN OPENER

MEMORABLE DAY

Flagstead, Myer, Rice Hit to Climax Last Inning Attack.

Hadley Allows 4 Hits in 7 Innings; Braxton Effective.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

TWENTY-FIVE thousand rabid fans, a record crowd for the season, yesterday turned out at the Clark Griffith Stadium to see the Nationals and Yankees meet in a double-header and, much to their delight, the home team decorated—or perhaps scarred is the better word—the world's champs' record with as many defeats, winning the first game handily, 8 to 5, and then coming back in the nightcap to stage a three-run rally in the ninth and to take it, 4 to 3. These triumphs made it three in a row for the Nats and marked the second time in as many weeks that they have taken both ends of a bargain-day bill from the New York sluggers.

As may be gleaned from the score, the second game was much the better of the two, with the Nats showing rare fight in finally eking out the runs needed to win. Many fans already were on their way home when the Nats suddenly uncorked their winning punch. Two runs behind entering the ninth, Judge coaxed a pass and Tate followed with a single. Johnson immediately rushed in Stuffy Stewart and Roy Spencer as utility runners.

When Hayes beat out a bunt past Koenig, the sacks were loaded. Pitcher Henry Johnson was derricked in favor of Wilcey Moore, and Ira Flagstead was sent to pinch hit for Lloyd Brown. Flagstead singled, scoring one run and causing considerable confusion on the bases. When the dust cleared away, it was discovered that he was still on first and that Hayes, who found himself on third with Spencer also there, was out. Tom Zachary relieved Moore and Myer then bunted Spencer home and beat out the throw. This knotted the count and put it up to Sam Rice, who responded with a liner-single to left which gave the Nats the run they needed to call it a day.

Hadley Passes Jinx Frame, While Pitching Five Balls.

Irving Hadley started on the hill against Henry Johnson and performed brilliantly, granting but four hits in seven innings. Manager Johnson had threatened to leave him in if hammered but he fooled his boss by not only not being hammered but by passing round five, his jinx frame, with colors flying. He was withdrawn in the seventh to let "Red" Barnes fan for him and Lloyd Brown finished out the string.

Garland Braxton and Herb Pennock started to make a southpaw battle of it in the opening contest, but only the former was still doing business at the finish. Except for loafing, or weakening slightly in the eighth, when the Yanks scored five runs, with a home run by Tony Lazzeri, with two on, being the big blow, he simply breezed through the contest. Neither Pennock nor Myles Thomas, who relieved him starting the sixth, was effective.

Ira Flagstead made his debut as a Nat and looked particularly good, especially when called upon in a pinch in the ninth frame of the final game when he delivered with the bases loaded.

Cronin Shares Day's Stick Honors With Sam Rice.

Joe Cronin, with four hits in the opener and one in the second, and Sam Rice, whose single broke up the nightcap game, led the Nats with the willow. The latter was credited with three safeties, including a triple, in the first game and with two one-basers in the second. Buddy Myer extended his consecutive-game hitting streak to 24, although he did not get his bingle in the final game until his last time up in the ninth, when it figured in Washington's winning rally.

Braxton gave an exhibition of almost perfect pitching in the first seven innings of the opening game, during which the Yankees were able to get only four hits in as many different innings, three coming after two were out. The only walk he issued during the

BLUE LARKSPUR'S SENSATIONAL FINISH WINS WITHERS

Dr. Freeland Fourth at Belmont

Fields, Injured, Claims Foul; His Mount Beaten a Head.

Derby Choice, Held Off Fast Pace, Drives to Victory.

By GEORGE DALEY.

NEW YORK, May 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Thirty thousand men and women gave thunderous tribute to E. R. Bradley's Blue Larkspur, the popular idol of a year ago, at Belmont Park today. The son of Black Servant, beaten favorite in the Kentucky Derby, won the historic Withers in the most spectacular finish of years. Four lengths out of it at the head of the stretch and two lengths back at the last sixteenth pole, he closed with an amazing rush and, knifing his way between Jack High and Chestnut Oak, won by a short head and snatched $28,250 from Clendening Ryan's chestnut Flash.

He ran the mile in the sparkling time of 1:36, an almost unbelievable performance, on top of chasing a pace which carried Chestnut Oak to the 6 furlongs in 1:10.

George D. Widener's Jack High, the favorite, fighting as he always fights, was lapped on the other two, beaten a scant half length in third place. hTe thousands who looked on and shouted in hysterical frenzy will never forget that finish.

As an appetizer to this brilliant struggle, Black Majesty raced to majestic triumph in the Juvenile Stakes for 2-year-olds and won $17,250 for W. R. Coe. Crack Brigade finished second, Prumper third and Sarazen II, the favorite, fourth.

Jockey Fields Foul Claim Not Allowed by Stewards.

The cheers still were ringing over Blue Larkspur's brilliant rush when those who backed the good 3-year-old at 5 to 2 were driven to anxious minutes as the stewards listened to a claim of foul lodged against the winner by George Fields, who rode Chestnut Oak.

The boy had to be lifted off the horse and carried to the jockey room with a badly bruised foot, and he charged Garner with putting him on the rail at the sixteenth pole. The stewards and everybody else knew better than that. Blue Larkspur was two lengths back at the time and only got to Chestnut Oak in the closing strides. He shot between the other two horses like an arrow. The claim was discussed and the finish confirmed as once again the shouts broke loose.

As a matter of fact, Chestnut Oak either was crowded against the rail or, drunk from his own exertions, staggered into it, but after the finish, not before. Field's foot was painfully injured, and he could be excused for being mixed in where it all happened.

Chestnut Oak also suffered with a bruised and scraped stifle, which may bring an interruption in his training for the Belmont Stakes on June 8.

Garner Rides Fine Race, Finishing With a Rush.

The unfortunate happening marred without changing the result of a race which will live for years. Mack Garner rode the winner and never rode a better one. He stayed away from the dizzy and almost killing early pace, which read 0:22 4-5 for the quarter, 0:45 4-5 for the half and, to cold, 1:10 for the 6 furlongs. This with 118 pounds up.

Perhaps Garner was forced to wait, but, in any case, he waited until straightened away for home and then made his call.

Blue Larkspur was on the rail, where he loves to run, and responded with one of those electrifying rushes which marked his winning of the Juvenile Stakes just a year ago to the day.

E. R. Bradley was elated and fully repaid, as he put it, for the loss of the Kentucky Derby. Blue Larkspur is himself again and the natural favorite for the Belmont Stakes.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY BERT E. COLLYER

HIGH HO!

Well gang, how do you feel? The morning after. Personally, toddle to the effort loving the tinkle in the old family pitcher. All of which brings us to the sweet little cush getter, TROJIS, which Breer Pons is going to cut loose for the boys this afternoon, over at Toronto. Lamp the gab appened by the chief. "This chap Pons is a heap sight better than a green hand and TROJIS is fit to run to the Rocky Mountains, get yours." Sounds like winning gab to me.

HOI POLLI, which was jerked forth from the old vat for the faithful—over at Woodbine—is another savory morsel. Right slam bang on the old beeser fellows—and don't hesitate. For the Canadian breds, second on the card, I am taking DUCISSA a trick that has shown some really excellent private trials. Also there was plenty of commissions, overnight in Toronto. Ye'weekum.

Over at Louisville, where the hard boots are having a real old-fashioned jollification, you scratch my back today and I'll scratch yours tomorrow. The dope is, have a wager on DOLLY SETH today. Watch her; she will forget to stop. Relative to that last effort, I might add that the stable connections did bet, but I really think she was a trifle short and was then eased up. On the Bill Daily end today. BLANC SEING, which towroped his field Wednesday evening for woe Sammy, possesses a bit of class and it will be dog eat dog if he tries to run head and head with the Von Roehm mare.

BLIND HILLS, another hard boot special, should be able to fall down and get up, turn three somersaults, then be first to look the judges in the eye. The same goes for GOLDEN RACKET, which is named in the opening dash. This doesn't look like a contest. REIGH OLGA was well "taken" over night, which means the Lehman trick had a very happy and restful evening, or words to that effect.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALL UPSET, $8.52, $3.84, $3.44; HIGH FOOT, $3.60, $3.44; SYDNEY, $8.76.

ALL UPSET was rushed into the lead immediately after start, opened up a good lead while saving ground and, continuing gamely, just lasted to hold HIGH FOOT safe. Latter was forced wide first three-eighths, came to outside of the winner all through the stretch and, continuing gamely, was rapidly gaining ground on SYDNEY. Never far back, but forced wide on the turn, closed strongly when clear. JIM DANDY showed a good performance from a slow beginning and closed an immense gap last sixteenth.

MARTINIQUE, well ridden and saving ground throughout, disposed of AGITATOR when called upon and, holding on courageously, outstayed PARAPHRASE in a drive. PARAPHRASE lost ground on both turns, continued gamely under hard pressure when straightened out, but faltered slightly last sixteenth. LION HEART closed well through stretch under punishment. AGITATOR displayed good speed to head of the stretch, then began tiring. KENTUCKY ACE gave an even effort.

THE SHOW OFF, away well, but taken back, raced into the lead with a rush when urged final quarter, swerved out when tiring, but outstayed MINERVUS in a mild drive. Latter had good speed from the start, opened up a good gap first quarter, was allowed to drop back at head of the stretch, but came again when hard urged. NOBLE WRACK raced forwardly, made a determined bid midway of the stretch, but was not good enough.

FAVORITES ADVANCE TO SEMIFINALS IN CITY TENNIS

O'Neil Beaten By Mitchell In Feature

Charest, Mangan and Judd Others to Advance.

No Upset Registered in Women's Singles.

FAVORITES came through with flying colors in the City of Washington tennis tournament being played on the Reservoir Courts and, as a result of yesterday's matches, Dooley Mitchell, Clarence Charest, Tom Mangan and Dean Judd advanced to the semifinal round. Mitchell advanced at the expense of Maurice O'Neil, 2—6, 6—4, 10—8; Charest eliminated Frank Shore, District junior champion, 6—3, 2—6, 6—3; Mangan defeated Maj. H. Hills, both at 6—0, while Judd's fifth round victim was John Ladd, who bowed, 6—4, 6—2.

The Mitchell-O'Neil match was one of the day's features bringing together as it did, two former municipal court champions. Mitchell played his usual aggressive game but was unable to get his shots under control in the first set, losing point after point because of nets or outs. He found himself in the last two sets, however, and gradually wore down O'Neil, although not without a bitter fight. In the third set, O'Neil showed plenty of fight but he finally went down after 18 bitter games in which the gallery was given plenty of thrills.

Mangan and Considine Enter Fifth Round in Men's Doubles.

Shore's hard, but unsuccessful fight against the veteran Charest also was worthy of mention for the youngster, after losing the opener, showed a flash of brilliant tennis to square the match by taking the second set. He was unable to stand the pace in the third and deciding one, however.

YANKS TWICE BEATEN BY NATS

game came in this stretch and it was quickly turned into a double play.

The slim southpaw weakened in the eighth, however, which saw the champions get their only runs of the game.

Johnson's team continued the hitting spree it started Wednesday and managed to bunch enough hits in three frames to give them their eight runs. The Nats broke the ice in the second, getting four from singles by Flagstead, Cronin, Ruel and Hayes, with Judge's sacrifice fly and an error by Paschall helping the cause along.

Round 5 netted two more runs. Rice opened with a single, Goslin walked, Flagstead suicided both along, and Cronin then cleared the bases with a single, while Cronin's fourth single of the game, Ruel's triple, and a one-shot by Hayes accounted for the final Washington markers in the "lucky" frame.

Singles By West and Cronin Allow Nationals to Score.

The second game was as different from the first as day is from night. There were several minor threats in the early frames, but neither team could score until the sixth when the Nats moulded a run.

Washington's tally resulted from singles by West and Cronin and Judge's hot bounder to Lazzeri. Although this latter blow was turned into a double-play, it let West hustle in from third. Tate followed with a one-base liner to left, but this blow was wasted.

This baby rally evidently gave the Yankees an idea, for they not only got this run back, but another for interest, in the next frame. Ruth opened this seventh with a double to the base of the stands in left-center and a moment later took third on a wild-pitch. He scored after Lazzeri had fanned when the Nats failed by a whisker to turn Dickey's roller into a double-play. The latter then stole second and Lary singled him home.

Brown faced the Yanks in the eighth and granted a run in which an error by Tate figured prominently.

Area Rich in Helium Found in Colorado

Gas in Sinbad Deposit Is Declared to Assay 7.07 Per Cent.

Representatives of the Helium Co. of Louisville, the only commercial producers of this noninflammable gas in the country, yesterday announced the discovery of the richest natural deposit of helium yet uncovered. The company holds contracts for delivery of helium to both the Army and Navy.

The new deposit was discovered in the Sinbad helium area by R. R. Bottoms, a naval reserve officer and chief chemist of the Louisville company. The location is close to the Government helium reserve, No. 1, in Colorado. The Sinbad area covers 15,000 acres and the gas assays 7.07 per cent helium. The highest previous content yet reported was 3.6 per cent, discovered about two months ago by the Helium company near its plant in the Utah Mountains.

With an abundant supply of helium in sight, the flying men expect to see commercial lighter-than-air development speeded up.

The announcement of the discovery of high-content helium gas was made by Col. Turney Gratz, chairman of the aeronautic advisory board of the Commonwealth of Kentucky and counsel for the helium company. Col. Gratz is an officer of the Kentucky State air service.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

Mr. Eugene O'Neil Gets the News in the "Strange Interlude" Manner.

(Scene: Office of the playwright's attorney.)

Mr. O'Neil: I'm being sued. (Aside: He's probably read the newspapers and knows all about it, but I'd better tell him.)

Lawyer: Is that it? (Aside: Of course that's so or he wouldn't say it.) Well, I'm sorry to hear it. (Aside: I am like'll; if people didn't get sued where would lawyers get off, eh?)

Mr. O'Neil: It's over "Strange Interlude." (Aside: Why doesn't he show more interest? I wonder if he's any good as a lawyer, anway.)

Lawyer: How could anybody sue you over "Strange Interlude?" Gene. (Aside: As a matter of fact, I know lots of people who think he should be sued over "Strange Interlude." Personally I think he should be sued over "Dynamo.")

Mr. O'Neil: It's a woman. She charges me with plagiarism. (I wonder if I've pronounced that word correctly. He probably wouldn't know.)

Lawyer: Plagiarism, eh? (Aside: I must look real profound now. I wonder how I look when I think I look profound. I must ask some one some time.)

Mr. O'Neil: Yes. (Aside: He heard me the first time, the big sap.)

Lawyer: Well, well, well. (Aside: A few well-wells like that don't mean anything but they help create an atmosphere. I wonder if he thinks I look profound enough. I find it harder to look profound now than I used to. I must be getting on.) Who is the plaintiff?

Mr. O'Neil: She's a lady named Georges Lewys. (Aside: I think that's the name.)

Lawyer: George S. Lewis? (Aside: I knew a man named George Lewis once: he sold buggy whips and had little red veins on his nose. Wonder what ever became of him?)

Mr. O'Neil: Not George S. Lewis; Georges—all one word——L-E-W-Y-S. (Aside: I'll have to write it out for him, I suppose. He looks pretty thick, even for a lawyer.)

Lawyer: What does she allege? (Aside: I really don't give a damn what she alleges, but I've got to listen, being his lawyer. I hope he will make it snappy.)

Mr. O'Neil: She charges that "Strange Interlude" gets its basic idea from a book of hers called "The Temple of Pallas-Athenae." (Aside: He doesn't even look interested.)

Lawyer: The temple of which? (Aside: I used to know a song about temple bells; lemme see how it went—tum-tum-tee-tee-dah-dah.)

Mr. O'Neil: Pallas Athenae. (Aside: He probably thinks Pallas Athenae is the name of a circus acrobat or something. Maybe I had better get some other lawyer.)

Lawyer: Is there any similarity at all between the two works? (Aside: There probably is or she wouldn't sue.)

Mr. O'Neil: Not the slightest. (Aside: I suppose there may be some similarity. No play or book was ever written that didn't have something in it similar to passages in another play or book.)

Lawyer: Well, there's nothing to get excited over. (Aside: Not until he gets my bill, anyhow.) This woman can't collect a nickel from you in any court on earth. (Aside: That's a pretty broad statement, but he needs cheering up.)

Mr. O'Neil: I'm sure of that. (Aside: If I was sure of it I wouldn't be talking to this walrus.) But I just thought I'd bring you the papers and leave everything to you. (Aside: Somehow I lose confidence in him every minute I remain here.) (Curtain.)

Prognosticating Peaches

The old-fashioned farmer used to determine whether his peaches were ripe enough to ship, by examining the color and squeezing each peach with his thumb. He was often wrong and lost money.

Today, the modern farmer, walking through his orchard, samples his peaches with a small plunger and pressure gauge. If the plunger registers three and a half to five pounds, off the peaches go to market; under three pounds, they're too ripe.

Scientific management has brought profits to farmers just as scientific management of investments brings profit to those who put their money into them.

Such investments are the First Mortgage Notes issued by Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Company which have been scientifically investigated and tested and whose interest at 6% will pay the investor a regular and steady return. The benefits of this science are awaiting your service.

The Return Of OLD KING BRADY

Revived by MERLE W. HERSEY

(Copyright Protected Reproduction in Whole or in Part Prohibited.)

THE BRADYS AFTER "BAD MAN" BROWN.

In the fifth chapter Old King Brady and Pedro escape from the gang and discover Ginger Joe wounded in a cave on the side of the ridge. They hear voices underground. In the meantime Harry and Gospel Jake have encountered Brown's gang underground, rescued Inez and got lost in the mine's passages. Suddenly the passage is choked with dirt at both ends and they are buried alive.

CHAPTER 6.

A New Game.

OLD KING BRADY was convinced that the wolf's den was in some way connected with the mine. They decided to explore and after attending to Joe's wounds they started into the dark cave. It terminated a little farther on.

"That settles it," said Old King Brady, with chagrin.

"But I tell ye I heard voices," declared Joe.

Just then a distant muffled cry for help came through the cavern wall. Old King Brady placed his ear against the wall of earth. Then there came plainly to his hearing a familiar voice: "The Lord is my Shepherd! He will not desert me! Even out of the wilderness He will deliver me!"

"Gospel Jake!" exclaimed the detective. "Thank heaven! We have found them."

Then Old King Brady raised his voice, "Hello! Who is there?"

A muffled series of exclamations could be heard, and then the tones of Harry Brady in a high key, "Hello Governor! Is that you?"

"It is, my boy!" shouted Old King Brady.

"Thank heaven! We are buried alive in the secret mine."

"Who is with you?" called the detective again.

"Gospel Jake and Inez." When Pedro heard this he gave a great shout of joy. Ginger Joe had already begun work at tearing away the earthen barrier with his hunting knife. They all worked as best they could—with success. Guided by the sounds of those in the cave those in the mine also worked. It was not long before an aperture was made. Then Inez crept through and clasped Pedro in her arms. Gospel Jake and Harry followed. Then Old King Brady listened to the thrilling story of the rescue of Inez.

It was now necessary to decide upon future plans.

Ginger Joe thought they had better not go back to Sunflower City while Brown had it under his control. Pedro excitedly offered "There is game in the hills and wild berries in the canyons. Oh, we shall live well."

"We have no fear," said Inez.

"But where will you find shelter?" said Old King Brady firmly. "You may be sure Brown will not long remain in power in Sunflower City."

Ginger Joe looked about him. "There are wuss places than caves to live in, an' it's safe. P'haps Jake could bring up blankets and cookin' things from his hut." This was finally agreed upon.

The detectives decided it would not do for them to return to Sunflower City in their present guise. They would be set upon by Brown's gang at once. Old King Brady had been thoughtful and now a new plan occurred to him. "I think we can defeat Brown at his own game," he said. "But it must be done in disguise." And he told his plan. "I will assume the role of Sierra Sam, a sport from California. You, Harry, can be Charlie Flip, a dude tenderfoot, and Joe here may be Tough Terry, the cowboy. We will have our usual secret system of signals, but must never be seen together."

"By jingo!" cried Ginger Joe. "That's the way to do it. I've got a hull cowboy outfit, too."

The old detective and Harry retired to a distant part of the cave, where they made their change of appearance. When they returned Old King Brady was a typical Western sport and Harry a perfect dude. Ginger Joe's outfit was in his cabin, but he could secure it after dark, easily enough.

When the shadows of evening fell, the detectives and Ginger Joe took the trail down to Sunflower City. As they approached the town they saw a great blaze of light. This was a huge bonfire and beside it, perched on top of the stage, minus its horses, were Badger Bill Smith and Brown. They were alternating making speeches to the crowd. Old King Brady shouldered his way through the crowd. He drew close to the stage in a conspicuous position. The Badger finished his speech and sat down. Brown arose and silence fell upon the crowd. The bad man cleared his throat and sent a searching gaze into the crowd. His eyes rested upon the tall figure of "Sierra Sam." He gave a start and frowned.

"Fellow citizens," he began. Then he came to a stop.

"Haw-haw-haw!" Sierra Sam's mouth opened wide in an ear-splitting horse laugh. The explosion of a dynamite bomb could not have created a greater sensation. Every eye was turned upon him. Brown turned as white as chalk. He glared at Sierra Sam. The latter returned his gaze blankly. Brown went on with his brief speech.

Vociferous cheers ensued at its close, and the crowd rushed into the hotel to drink at Brown's expense. Old King Brady went with them.

Sierra Sam, the sport, seated himself at a table and began rattling dice on its rough surface. He appeared to ignore all about him. The crowd did not notice Tough Terry when he entered. And behind him minced a startling apparition. Few of the rough men in that crowd had ever seen anything like it.

"Aw, beg pardon, aw! Can some of you chaps awsk the portah to show me the way to the lift?" Adjusting his monocle, Charlie Flip looked supercilliously about the place.

Every man at the bar turned. For a moment there was dead silence, then—

"What d'yer call it?"

"How did it escape?"

"Hello, Lizzie! Whar's yer mother?"

"Haw-haw-haw!"

The dude seemed nonplused. "Aw, what a dweadful place!" he said petulantly. "I think I'll go on to the next town. So insolent, to be shaw!"

Several of the miners joined hands and swung a circle about the dude.

"Come on, boys! Let's hev some fun. Whoop-la!"

Crack! A bullet punctured the floor beside Charlie Flip. The dude leaped in the air and tried to break through the line.

"Call off yer dogs! Stand back!" A powerful figure walked into the line. Sierra Sam, cold and with flashing eyes, stood beside the dude.

"Ye pack of coyotes!" he cried in a clarion voice. "Ye don't dare to tackle men of yer own kind, but ye must pick on tenderfoots. Try yer jokes on me!"

Into the ring stepped Tough Terry. "Right ye are, pard!" he said. "I'll stand for ye, too."

The crowd fell back sullenly. Sierra Sam again emitted that strange horse laugh that had first called attention to him at the stage-coach wheel.

"No hard feelin's, gents!" he cried. "Step up an' drink to ther health of the poor dude."

Drinks were soon passing over the bar and toasts to the sport and the dude were in order. Thus matters stood when into the barroom walked Brown.

The bad man's fishy gaze swept the room. He glared at Sierra Sam with the cold, cynical smile on his expressionless face.

Sierra Sam turned carelessly, "Who the deuce is he? Fill up, gents. Here's to success." He snapped his finger, "Stand up and hev a drink, friend!"

Brown did not reply. The smile faded from his face. "Who are you?" he asked.

"Sierra Sam, from Caleveras County. I'm a sport and I never take backwater. D'ye see?"

The bad man's hand flashed to his revolver, but Sierra Sam's pistol-muzzle looked him square in the eye. "None of that, friend, put up your gun!" said the California sport quietly.

Brown's hand fell. "Shoot him!" he hissed. "Are you all going to see me made a fool of?"

There was a slight movement in the crowd. Tough Terry laid two revolvers over the table, "Ther fust man ter interfere dies!" he called out in a stern voice.

The Confession.

Brown trembled with impotent fury and utter helplessness. Sierra Sam laughed. "Step up an' drink," he said in a deep voice. "It may be your last chance on earth. Will ye do it?"

"No!" hissed Brown, making another effort to draw.

Crack! The bad man yelled—the tip of one finger had been shot off. The voice of Sierra Sam was like thunder, "Now will ye do what I say?"

The bad man stepped to the bar, lifted the glass and drained it. Sierra Sam thrust the muzzle of his pistol in Brown's face and plucked the bad man's revolver from his belt. At the same moment he stepped back and said: "Now I'm going to kill ye, Barton Brown. You are a black murderer, you have killed a dozen men. Now I'm going to rid the country of its blackest spot. Get down on your knees, you black scoundrel—down, I say!"

Down went the bad man. "Don't kill me!" chattered the cowardly wretch.

"Kill you? I'm goin' to do worse. Repeat these words after me: As I hope for judgment and mercy after death—" Brown's voice trembled as he repeated them.

"I hereby swear that all I utter here is the truth—"

"And I do solemnly confess—"

"In the presence of these witnesses—"

"That I did with malice and evil intent take the life of Luther Benjamin and abstract from his private papers the plan and title of a mine known as the Sunflower Shaft—"

"Let's have the whole story. Out with it." Sierra Sam spoke sternly. And, cowering there on the barroom floor Brown, the erstwhile bad man, told of his crime in New York which had made him an exile in Nevada.

"Call off yer dogs! Stand back!" A powerful figure walked into the line. Sierra Sam, cold and with flashing eyes, stood beside the dude.

"Ye pack of coyotes!" he cried in a clarion voice. "Ye don't dare to tackle men of yer own kind, but ye must pick on tenderfoots. Try yer jokes on me!"

Into the ring stepped Tough Terry. "Right ye are, pard!" he said. "I'll stand for ye, too."

The crowd fell back sullenly. Sierra Sam again emitted that strange horse laugh that had first called attention to him at the stage-coach wheel.

"No hard feelin's, gents!" he cried. "Step up an' drink to ther health of the poor dude."

Drinks were soon passing over the bar and toasts to the sport and the dude were in order. Thus matters stood when into the barroom walked Brown.

The bad man's fishy gaze swept the room. He glared at Sierra Sam with the cold, cynical smile on his expressionless face.

Sierra Sam turned carelessly, "Who the deuce is he? Fill up, gents. Here's to success." He snapped his finger, "Stand up and hev a drink, friend!"

Brown did not reply. The smile faded from his face. "Who are you?" he asked.

"Sierra Sam, from Caleveras County. I'm a sport and I never take backwater. D'ye see?"

The bad man's hand flashed to his revolver, but Sierra Sam's pistol-muzzle looked him square in the eye. "None of that, friend, put up your gun!" said the California sport quietly.

Brown's hand fell. "Shoot him!" he hissed. "Are you all going to see me made a fool of?"

There was a slight movement in the crowd. Tough Terry laid two revolvers over the table, "Ther fust man ter interfere dies!" he called out in a stern voice.

The Confession.

Brown trembled with impotent fury and utter helplessness. Sierra Sam laughed. "Step up an' drink," he said in a deep voice. "It may be your last chance on earth. Will ye do it?"

"No!" hissed Brown, making another effort to draw.

Crack! The bad man yelled—the tip of one finger had been shot off. The voice of Sierra Sam was like thunder, "Now will ye do what I say?"

The bad man stepped to the bar, lifted the glass and drained it. Sierra Sam thrust the muzzle of his pistol in Brown's face and plucked the bad man's revolver from his belt. At the same moment he stepped back and said: "Now I'm going to kill ye, Barton Brown. You are a black murderer, you have killed a dozen men. Now I'm going to rid the country of its blackest spot. Get down on your knees, you black scoundrel—down, I say!"

Down went the bad man. "Don't kill me!" chattered the cowardly wretch.

"Kill you? I'm goin' to do worse. Repeat these words after me: As I hope for judgment and mercy after death—" Brown's voice trembled as he repeated them.

"I hereby swear that all I utter here is the truth—"

"And I do solemnly confess—"

"In the presence of these witnesses—"

"That I did with malice and evil intent take the life of Luther Benjamin and abstract from his private papers the plan and title of a mine known as the Sunflower Shaft—"

"Let's have the whole story. Out with it." Sierra Sam spoke sternly. And, cowering there on the barroom floor Brown, the erstwhile bad man, told of his crime in New York which had made him an exile in Nevada.

Another chapter in this serial masterpiece is in tomorrow's paper—Don't miss it!

Imprisonment Rewarded.

They were held as material witnesses in a case in which the defendant eventually was exonerated. Officials decided they should be paid $2 for every day they were kept behind the bars.

CAPPER INDORSES HOOVER POLICY ON POSTS IN DISTRICT

Appointments on Merit Alone Best for City, Asserts Kansas Senator.

PATRONAGE ROW HERE CAUSES HIS COMMENT

Government Best Served by Men Not Affiliated With Political Parties.

President Hoover's method of making appointments to local offices was praised last night by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, chairman of the Senate District committee.

"I think the President is wise in selecting candidates without regard to political factors or influences," Capper said. "The fact that the President has ignored the local Republican organization in making appointments here may disturb the political leaders, but I do not think it has disturbed the general run of taxpayers. What they want is the best appointees obtainable. And that, evidently, is what the President is determined to give them.

"I don't know of any two appointments that have been so generally praised by the civic and trade organizations here as those of Gen. Patrick and Mr. Hartman to be members of the Public Utilities Commission. And, as I understand it, neither of these men was appointed for political reasons."

White House Visit Told.

Capper was led to make his statement by newspaper accounts of a visit made to the White House by the two Republican leaders here, Edward F. Colladay, Republican national committeeman, and Samuel J. Prescott, chairman of the Republican State committee. The two leaders, it is understood, went to the White House in an effort to regain their old patronage power.

The theory has been that a local political organization, in exchange for getting out the 60,000 or so absentee votes here at election time, should be given its reward in the form of patronage if its candidate gets into the White House. In naming Gen. Patrick and Hartman, however, President Hoover ignored the local Republican organization and selected what he thought to be the best men available.

At a meeting in Republican headquarters Tuesday night, the selection of these two men was sharply criticized.

In further commenting on the situation last night, Senator Capper said:

Too Much Politics Seen.

"In the past there has been entirely too much political influence behind local appointments. As a matter of fact, I can see no reason why politics should play any part in the selection of men for public office here.

"So far as politics is concerned, the District of Columbia occupies a unique position. It is a city in which we are all interested, the last city in which appointments should be dictated by politicians.

"What we need here are the biggest men obtainable, men whose training and experience qualify them for the job, selected without regard to political or selfish motives."

FORT STEVENS DEAD GIVEN HONOR IN RITES

Tribute Paid to 20 Union Soldiers Who Died in Capital Battle.

AFFRAY IS LITTLE KNOWN

Tribute to the memory of two score Union soldiers, who were killed defending the Nation's Capital at the battle of Fort Stevens in 1864, was paid yesterday by more than 300 persons at the Battle Ground National Cemetery, site of the battle.

Representative Burton L. French, of Idaho, the principal speaker, decried the lack of importance given the battle by historians. He and Dr. Charles V. Petteys, chairman of the exercises and survivor of the conflict, recalled details of the struggle.

The battle was the only one in the vicinity of the District witnessed by President Abraham Lincoln, they said, and resulted, from strategy of the Confederate leader, Robert E. Lee, to prolong the Civil War.

The Union forces were storming Richmond, the speakers recalled, when Lee decided on an attempt to take the Union Capital. The famous Gen. Early was detailed to lead an army against Washington, which was protected by inexperienced militiamen. The battle was fought July 11 and 12, 1864, the speakers declared, and resulted in death to 54 and wounds to 300 of the Union forces, while the Confederate casualty list numbered 300 wounded. The dead represented more than one-sixth of the entire total killed in the Spanish-American War, Mr. French stated.

An appeal for observance of law and aid in the outlawing of crime as asked by President Hoover in a recent address also was made by Mr. French.

The ceremonies included other speeches by John M. Kline, reading of an original poem by John Claggett Proctor, recitation of "Lincoln's Gettysburg Address" by Theodore Harpy, invocation by the Rev. Daniel L. Snyder and benediction by the Rev. William L. Mayo. The Third Cavalry Band, under the direction of Louis S. Vassel, played and the Battle Ground Quartet, composed of Mrs. Thomas H. Mullenberg, Mrs. William W. Wallace, L. F. Randolph and Edwin T. Boylen, with Harry W. Howard as accompanist, was heard in several selections.

Children of the public schools of Brightwood decorated the graves of the shrine's 40 heroes. The exercises were staged under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic and the Brightwood Citizens Association.

Garber Is Speaker At Congressional

G. A. R., Veterans of Foreign and Spanish Wars Hold Service.

A new vision of the spiritual ideals that brought courage and sacrifice to the hearts of those now silent in death must be caught by those who wish to do proper honor to the memories of the heroic defenders of the Nation, Representative J. A. Garber, of Virginia, stated yesterday in a Memorial Day address at exercises held in Congressional Cemetery under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic, the United Spanish War Veterans and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"It is ours to live and make real the ideals for which they fought and died." Representative Garber said. "And so, as we do honor to the memory of our sacred dead, may we remember to live for the principles for which they died."

The exercises included the presentation of colors by United States sailors; the invocation and benediction by the Rev. Edw. Gabel, of Christ Episcopal Church, whose choir sang; numbers by the United States Navy Band, and remarks by Junior Vice Department Commander S. F. Hamilton, of the Grand Army of the Republic.

FLAGS MARK NURSE MEMORIAL SERVICE

Jane A. Delano Post, Legion Auxiliary, Pays Tribute at Arlington.

CHAPLAIN DICKSON TALKS

An impressive flag ceremony, in which the only American flag that appeared on the entire western front of the allies from Switzerland to the North Sea formed the center of the massing of colors, was part of the memorial service held for United States Army nurses of the Spanish-American and World War in the nurses' section at Arlington Cemetery yesterday. The Jane A. Delano Post, District of Columbia, American Legion Auxiliary, conducted the ceremony.

Margaret Woodzell, senior vice commander of the post, in the absence of the commander, Annie S. Humphry, paid tribute to the war nurses who are buried in Arlington and elsewhere. Col. Thomas J. Dickson, Chaplains Corps, U. S. Army, retired, brought three historic flags to the service, the large American flag that traveled the entire western front, a small flag he used in burying men where they had fallen on the field, and a chaplain's flag, a blue flag with a white Christian cross, shot through with sixteen holes, none of which in the small flag had touched the cross. All flags were put at half mast. The post colors and its standards were massed with these historic flags during the services.

"We are assembled on the ground where rests those who changed the world from monarchies to republics," Chaplain Dickson said. "It is well for us to pay in appreciative citizenship the debt of gratitude we owe to our immortals."

Raising the flag of the western front, Chaplain Dickson said: "To me the red of this flag is a little redder, the white a little whiter, and the stars seem to shimmer and glow as never before, because of its deep and significant history.

"This flag," he said, raising it higher, "was flown in five major battles where Americans shed their blood; it traveled the entire western front from Switzerland to the North Sea, and looked upon the living line of some 3,000 miles of American men and women standing invincible for America and American ideals along the battle fronts."

Wreaths were placed about the plot and the graves decorated with beautiful flowers. There are 41 nurses buried in Arlington.

Peary Lauded in Service By Veterans Aboard Ship

A poppy anchor, placed upon the waters of the Potomac River yesterday, was a feature of the Memorial Day exercises held on board the U. S. S. Grampus at the navy yard, under the auspices of the Admiral Robert E. Peary Ship, No. 427, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Capt. W. R. Van Auken, U. S. N., delivered an address in commemoration of Admiral Peary, and P. V. Templeton presided.

U. D. C. Unveil Tablet To Gen. Lee's Daughter

A bronze tablet in memory of Ann Carter Lee, daughter of Gen. Robert E. Lee, commander of the Confederate armies, was unveiled yesterday morning at Memorial Day services in Arlington National Cemetery by the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

The unveiling took place near the longleaf pine tree planted some years ago as a tribute to Miss Lee, and was followed by a visit to the room in which Gen. Lee was married in his old home on the reservation.

Mrs. Hoover's Wreath Put on Argonne Cross

A memorial wreath presented by Mrs. Herbert Hoover in honor of the overseas dead was placed on the Argonne cross in Arlington National Cemetery yesterday morning at exercises held by the American Women's Legion. It was placed upon the cross by Mrs. George N. Thompson, past president.

Mrs. Edward Campbell Shields, national president of the legion, placed a poppy shield on the cross for her organization. The Rev. H. H. Sterrett conducted the religious services.

26 Persons Arrested As Holiday Inebriates

Twenty-six persons were arrested yesterday and spent last night locked up in Washington police precinct cells on charges of intoxication, a check-up at the close of Decoration Day revealed.

The Third Precinct, one of the city's two busiest precincts, led the scoresheet with nine arrests for intoxication. The famous Eighth Precinct passed the entire day without an arrest for drunkenness.

MAJ. PRATT ORDERS BRIDGE SPEEDING OF TROLLEYS STOPPED

POST STORY ON PERIL TOLD HIM OF SITUATION

Police Head Wonders Why No One Reported Menace Howser Disclosed.

Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police, yesterday called on the commanders of two precincts to put an end to the speeding of street cars of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. across the P Street Bridge.

Pratt's first knowledge that street cars were speeding dangerously across the bridge at night was obtained from an account of a report by H. R. Howser, assistant engineer of bridges, published in The Post.

The police chief forthwith called on Capt. Robert E. Doyle, of the Eighth Precinct, and Capt. Maurice Collins, of the Seventh Precinct, to arrest every motorman who speeded across the bridge.

Calls Safety Ignored.

Pratt was somewhat put out because no one had told him of the dangerous speeding of street cars across the bridge, the District Commissioners Wednesday having referred the report of Howser to the Public Utilities Commission for action.

Howser declared that Washington Railway & Electric motormen totally disregarded the speed and safety laws in approaching and crossing the P Street Bridge and warned the Commissioners that it would be nothing less than "criminal" to permit conditions to continue.

Serious loss of life, Howser said, might result from the speeding street cars across a bridge structure which was not built to withstand the shock. The car tracks, he said, were not equipped with lips on curves, as were street tracks, and the woodwork of the bridge was entirely inadequate to hold the cars should they jump the track.

Pratt Promises Action.

"The first I knew of the situation was when I read Mr. Howser's report in The Post," Pratt said yesterday. "Therefore I have nothing to say for publication. But any and every motorman who violates the speed or safety laws going over that bridge is going to land in court or I'm going to know the reason why they don't."

Pratt's memorandum was transmitted to his captains by Lieut. L. I. H. Edwards and was a blanket order to remedy conditions immediately.

Pioneer Planners Of Capital Honored

Exercises Held in Several Cemeteries by Institute of Architects.

Early city planners and designers of the National Capital were honored at Memorial Day exercises held in various cemeteries yesterday by the Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

Justice Frederick L. Siddons, of the District Supreme Court, made the principal address in honor of George Hadfield, designer of the original plans for the District Courthouse, at the services held in Congressional Cemetery, where Alexander B. Trowbridge also spoke in commemoration of the work of Dr. William Thornton, designer of the Capitol. David Lynn, Capitol architect, in an address urged that a suitable monument be erected in Dr. Thornton's memory.

Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, executive officer of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, spoke at Arlington in appreciation of the services of Maj. Pierre L'Enfant, creator of the Federal City plan now being brought to perfection. Col. Grant declared that L'Enfant's far-visioned fundamental plan had had a vital effect upon the city.

Exercises were also held at Mount Olivet Cemetery, where the architects paid homage to James Hoban, designer of the White House. Justice Siddons praised the Courthouse Building as being one of the finest examples of its period, and said that it is a fitting structure to be the crowning feature of the new group of magnificent municipal buildings to be erected to the south on either side of John Marshall place.

Masons Dedicate Cemetery Tract

Memorial Day Ceremony Is Held by Acacia Lodge of Colored Members.

Memorial day exercises were held yesterday at the Lincoln Memorial Cemetery. The Masonic section by the Acacia Grand Lodge of colored Masons was consecrated. Addresses were made by W. H. Cohran, in place of Dr. W. H. Jackson, past grand master, and John H. Paynter. Services of tribute to the late Grand Master Charles P. Ford were paid under auspices of a committee consisting of J. H. Paynter, Mrs. Ethel Jennifer and Mrs. Ethel Evans. Wreaths were placed over the grave of the late grand master and the late Judge Robert H. Terrell.

Memorial services following the Masonic program included an invocation by the Rev. William D. Jarvis, musical selections by the Burleigh Singers, the memorial address by the Rev. Hampton T. Medford, benediction by Dr. J. H. Randolph. Dr. W. H. Jernagin was master of ceremonies.

Tribute to the memory of former members of Prince Hall Chapter, of the Order of Eastern Star, was paid at Harmony Cemetery by Manning C. Jones, who also paid a special tribute to the late George F. T. Cook, former superintendent in charge of colored schools.

Representatives of six denominations, interested in the movement for Christian unity, will meet at Washington Cathedral this evening to consider the report on the ministry prepared at the International Conference on Faith and Order held at Lausanne, Switzerland, in 1927. The conference will continue through Monday. As a majority of the participants were in attendance at the historic Switzerland meeting, their conclusions are expected to receive widespread attention in religious circles.

The Rev. C. B. Wilmer, of Sewanee, Tenn., a representative of the Protestant Episcopal Church, will be chairman, and the Rev. Floyd Tompkins, jr., of Philadelphia, will serve as secretary. The Baptist Church will be represented by the Rev. Robert A. Ashworth, of Yonkers, N. Y.; the Methodist Episcopal Church South, by the Rev P. T. Durham, of Emory University, Atlanta, Ga.; the Quaker Church, by the Rev. Alfred C. Garrett, of Philadelphia; the Lutheran Church, by the Rev. M. G. Scherer, of New York, and the Presbyterian Church, by the Rev. George Stewart, of Stamford, Conn.

Prominent Clergymen to Attend.

Among other clergymen who are expected to attend are the Very Rev. R. S. Chalmers, of Dallas, Tex.; the Rev. Angus Dun, of the Episcopal Theological Seminary, Cambridge, Mass.; the Rev. Frank Gavin, of the General Theological Seminary, New York; the Very Rev. Frederick C. Grant, dean of Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill., and the Rev. Marshall Bowyer Stewart, of General Theological Seminary, New York.

Making public the plans for the gathering, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, said: "Washington Cathedral extends a hearty welcome to its guests for this important meeting, which is to consider one of the reports of the Lausanne conference, and esteems it a privilege to have them here. It is my desire, as well as that of the dean and chapter, that more and more the facilities of the cathedral will be used for such purposes."

Guests of College of Preachers.

The visiting clergymen will be the guests of the College of Preachers of Washington Cathedral and will be entertained in the apartments on Wisconsin avenue, occupied by that institution pending the completion of its permanent home, now in course of construction just east of the apse of the cathedral. The sessions will take place in the memorial wing of the Washington Cathedral Library. The visitors are expected to occupy the pulpits of leading churches of their respective communions on Sunday. Announcements of the various assignments are to be made later.

While the specific topics of discussion have not been announced, it is believed that the conference will consider five phases of the ministry under the following headings: "The Minister as a Prophet," "The Minister as a Teacher," "The Minister as an Administrator of Temporal Affairs," "The Minister as a Pastor in the Exercise of Discipline" and "The Minister as a Priest."

Memorial Is Held At Home Cemetery

Old Soldiers Attend Rite at Which Gen. Logan Is Honored.

Memorial Day exercises were held yesterday morning in the United States Soldiers' Home Cemetery under auspices of various veterans' and patriotic societies of the District. James S. Ruby, superintendent of the cemetery, was in charge of arrangements, assisted by committees composed of officials of the home and the various societies.

Following a parade, led by First Sergt. Edward Byrne, marshal, services were held at the tomb of Gen. John A. Logan, who 61 years ago inaugurated Memorial Day with general orders to the Army designating May 30 for the purpose "of strewing with flowers the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country."

The program included addresses by W. E. Andrews and F. J. Young, senior vice commander of the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R., who presided; music by the United States Soldiers' Home Band, and the reading of Gen. Logan's order by Mrs. Edith Bugbee.

Memorial Observance Is Called Sacred Duty

Perpetuation of the principles upon which Memorial Day is founded is a sacred obligation which no American may properly shirk, George Francis Williams, auditor of the District Supreme Court, declared yesterday in an address at exercises held at Oak Hill Cemetery under the joint auspices of William B. Cushing Camp, Sons of Union Veterans; George E. Killeen Post, American Legion, and Auxiliary No. 4 to the Sons of Union Veterans.

Charles S. Davis opened the exercises with the invocation and an address also was made by William B. Wells, senior vice commander of William B. Cushing Camp. Past Commander of the Camp John F. Hauck read the order creating Memorial Day, and Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by Adelbert A. Taylor. The benediction was pronounced by Joseph H. Beckwith.

TAXI MAN IS KILLED IN FIGHT WITH PAL

Albert Kirby Dies of Fractured Skull After Brawl That Follows Drinking.

FORREST DAMRON HELD

A drunken brawl between two friends early yesterday morning in front of 601 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, resulted in the death of one and the arrest of the other on a charge of manslaughter.

Albert Kirby, 30 years old, of 2005 Benning road northeast, is the dead man. Forrest F. Damron, 35 years old, a wounded World War veteran, who rooms at the Pennsylvania avenue address, is the man under arrest. The fight between the two occurred about 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning, according to police.

Kirby was picked up from the sidewalk by Ira R. Neely, of 1354 G street southeast, who found him unconscious and taken to Emergency Hospital, where he was pronounced dead by Dr. Walter Gladding. He suffered a fractured skull.

Death Surprises Damron.

Damron was arrested by Headquarters Detective Sergeant H. K. Wilson, several hours later. Damron had just returned from the office of a physician, who had treated him for a broken left thumb.

The prisoner was surprised to hear his "pal" was dead, Wilson said. He did not believe he had been seriously hurt. He gave police the following version of the affair:

Dawson and Kirby, with several other friends, attended a drinking party in his room Wednesday night. Kirby left the party in the early morning hours in good humor, Damron said, but returned later and asked if any one had seen his automobile keys.

Friends for Ten Years.

A search was made but the keys were not found. Kirby then left the room. A moment later he pounded on the door for admittance. The next moment he broke the glass in the door with his fist, according to Damron. Kirby and Damron walked down the stairs and were standing in front of the entrance when they became involved in a dispute, according to the police.

Damron told police he hit Kirby a glancing blow on his forehead with his right fist and then struck him in the face with his left hand. Kirby fell backwards and Damron then walked back to his room, he said. When he went out to get his thumb treated, Kirby had been taken to the hospital. Physicians believe Kirby suffered the fractured skull when his head hit the sidewalk.

Kirby was a taxicab driver. Damron is employed as a cigar clerk. Both have been good friends for more than ten years, police said.

2 TEACHERS' BODIES TAKEN FROM RIVER AFTER CANOE UPSET

Almost Entire Day Spent by Searching Party Before Victims Are Found.

ONE PAIR SAVES LIVES BY CLINGING TO BOAT

Occupants Believed Thrown Into Water When Man Stands Up.

The bodies of Miss Merla Matthews, 30 years old, and William Lavendar, 28 years old, public school teachers who were drowned early yesterday morning in the Potomac River about half a mile above Key Bridge while canoeing with two companions, were recovered yesterday afternoon by police of the Harbor Precinct.

Norman R. Hagen, 22 years old, a roommate of Lavendar, who lived at 2115 F street northwest, and Miss Della Wynn, 25 years old, of 1633 Sixteenth street northwest, who were in the canoe when it overturned, saved their lives by clinging to the frail craft. Hagen aided police in the recovery of the bodies.

Thought Expert Swimmers.

Miss Matthews, physical director at the Langley Junior High School, lived in the Hampton Courts, 2013 New Hampshire avenue northwest. Miss Matthews and Lavendar, a teacher at the same school, were considered expert swimmers, but are believed to have been dragged down by their water-soaked clothing while swimming to shore to get aid for their companions. The water at the point where they drowned is about 40 feet deep.

Clinging to the overturned craft, Hagen and Miss Wynn drifted to shore a short distance below the Colonial Camp. They were nearly exhausted when lifted from the water by campers who were attracted by their cries for help and shouts to Lavendar and Miss Matthews.

Campers along both banks of the river were notified of the tragedy, as were police from the Harbor Precinct, who dispatched three boat crews to the scene, and started an immediate search for the victims. Hagen and Miss Wynn were very nervous from their experience and were unable at first to point out the spot where the canoe overturned.

Details Are Vague.

Neither Hagen nor Miss Wynn could give police an accurate description of how the accident occurred. Miss Wynn, the calmer of the two, however, said she was seated in the prow and Hagen was in the stern, both paddling. Miss Matthews and Lavendar were seated in the bottom of the canoe. Suddenly, she said, the craft lurched to the right side. She turned around and saw Lavendar standing up. The canoe overturned immediately.

All four occupants, fully clothed, were thrown into the water. Coming to the surface, Miss Wynn and Hagen clung to the sides of the craft. Miss Matthews and Lavendar, the better swimmers, saw their companions holding on to the sides of the boat and, evidently believing the craft would not stay up with four persons holding onto it, started to swim to shore, about a quarter of a mile away.

Both Hagen and Miss Wynn believed their friends were swimming to shore to bring them aid. They did not fear for their companions' safety at first, but when they failed to hear from them as they neared the shore, began calling for help.

At this point they were opposite the cabin of Edward Gibson, a camper. They shouted for help. Gibson said he saw the two before they shouted, but believed they were out for a swim. He pulled off his clothing and jumped in the water. He aided in steering the canoe to shore, where other campers helped them out.

Miss Matthews lived with her brother, Gordon Matthews. She was graduated from George Washington with a degree of bachelor of arts, and since had been studying for her master's degree. She was appointed a physical instructor in the local public schools September 1, 1922. For several years she was stationed at the Park View School, but last year was transferred to the Langley School.

Lavendar was a teacher in the ungraded classes. He would have been 24 years old next month. He came to this city last fall to take up school work. He is a graduate of Augustana College.

Williams was arrested and held at the Second Precinct on a charge of murder.

Woman Sought Death By Gas, Police Assert

Boy Spends $8 Recklessly After Store Theft of $140

"So I spent the $8."

William Lewis Toomer, colored 8 years old, 106 Tenth street southeast, accounted to police of the Fifth Precinct last night for the $8 missing from the $140 roll of greenbacks which he took from the cash register of a grocery and market at 1001 North Caroline avenue southeast, owned by Mrs. Susan O'Sullivan.

The eight $1 bills disappeared in an orgy of spending yesterday in which William purchased for himself a new cap, and soda pop, chewing gum, candy and lollipops for all of the other youngsters in his neighborhood, he told police. He was arrested at his home, where the remainder of the money was found, by Policemen C. E. Thorne and R. H. Taylor, attached to the Fifth Precinct. William was duly questioned as to age, address and occupation, and was charged with grand larceny. He was released in the custody of his mother for appearance in Juvenile Court today.

The boy said the money "looked good" and that he took it without knowing its value, police said.
